Labor Discredited By Its Spokesmen.

The remarkable statement of the president of the Victoria Trades and Labor Council that if dictator of Canada he would expropriate the C. P. R. and advertise for tenders for operating the trains, gives a pretty good idea of what would happen if the country were in the hands of the absolutely ignorant. No one but an ignoramus would have suggested such a thing as advertising for tenders to run trains. Here is a class of work which requires the highest type of intellect, that requires the most perfect organization in order to have everything safe for the general public. Men devote their whole lives to the business and make a study of it, and then some Bolshevik would come along and let the work to a wholly new organization just because they put in a lower tender. That would be the way to send the travelling public to Hades by the shortest route.

Again the president of the Victoria Trades and Labor Council would let the work to the lowest tenderer, which means that the labor would be sweated in order to earn dividends, even worse than at present.

Why is it that the workmen do not choose their leaders or their presiding officers with care. The Victoria Labor Council is supposed to represent the workers of Victoria, and yet that is the best idea he can put forward. Surely the world war has made lunatics of us all!

The News has no plea for the C. P. R. It is a corporation that has been successful in doing a great work for Canada, but like most other corporations it has been soulless. It pays good dividends to the shareholders and often it does that at the expense of its employees. At the same time it is better than anything else that offers for the work, better probably than government ownership. One of the first things for labor to do when it gets into power should be to hang a few of its few fool spokesmen who discredit it on every occasion.

League of Nations Adopted by Conference.

The League of Nations yesterday came into being. It is ridiculed in some quarters and prophesies of its uselessness are made in other quarters, but the fact remains that it is the first honest attempt to have the nations of the world get together and settle their differences without recourse to war. It may fail, but if it does it may point the way to future improvements. President Wilson has carried his point and everyone will wish it may be successful in its working out, for no one desires war unless it be a few profiteers who make money out of it.

Idleness Does Not Mean Happiness.

In a remarkable address before the Leeds Luncheon Club, W. A. Appleton, secretary of the General Federation of Trade Unions in Great Britain, declared that one general misapprehension was that idleness made for happiness. Continuing, he said, as reported in The London Times:

If people who were striving for more leisure were only doing so in order that they might do nothing, he was sure that they were not going to be any happier. It was the exercise of thought and creative capacity that afforded the highest happiness. He was afraid we were getting into trouble by imagining that shorter hours necessarily meant less unemployment. The effect would be seriously to increase the cost of production and the selling price in overseas markets. He feared they were making the mistake of assuming that the grievances of the minority were more important than the welfare of the majority. They were having lightning strikes, which were stopping production and holding up the whole country. We were running after will o' the wisps, and later on we would have to pay for the foolishness that had kept us more or less idle for the past three months. Three occupations were today combining to compel the rest of the workers to pay additions to their wages. He wanted the miners, the railwaymen and the transport workers to have a good time, but they should realize that every penny put upon the community handicapped the other fellow.
