Cultivation of Art Is Worthy Object.

There is danger in a new community such as this, where everyone is bent on securing as much as possible of this world's goods, of missing the higher things of life. In the fight for a living the sciences and arts are to a large extent neglected and there is a noticeable dropping back in the standards of living.

Perhaps there is a notable exception to this. That is in the art of music. No matter how crude the community, and there is no suggestion that this one is crude, music goes with it. Into even the small country districts musical instruments are carried and the art of singing and playing on these instruments is practised.

Prince Rupert is not behind in this art. The Prince Rupert Musical Society, which was formed less than a year ago, has already done much to arouse an interest throughout the community in music and especially in part singing. Its efforts have been ably seconded by the symphony orchestra. Tonight these two organizations are to give an exhibition of their work in the Westholme Theatre and the people are already responding well in the matter of purchasing tickets.

By attending this concert or by purchasing tickets the people are given an opportunity, not only of passing an enjoyable evening, but of encouraging the society in its efforts to educate the public musically, and to steer them away from their money-grubbing occupations to a higher conception of the harmonies of life.

Red Cross Will Cease Activities.

Announcement is made that the local Red Cross Society will cease its activities at the end of this month. The work is no longer badly needed, the occasion for the activities of the Red Cross having to a large extent ceased.

There are as yet no complete figures to give a realization of just what the society has done, how much comfort it has provided for the boys at the front and how much effort has been put into the work at home. The full extent of the work will never be known. Its far-reaching effect on the winning of the war will never be told, for it cannot be. Suffice it to say here that Prince Rupert's Red Cross Society has been right to the fore in the good work, that men and women, and especially women, have been most assiduous in seeing that if the men went short of anything it was not the fault of the local organization. The public have responded nobly to the calls which have been made and the result has been most creditable.

Value of Swimming Must Be Impressed.

The value of swimming has been mentioned in these columns on more than one occasion, but the opening of the season by the visit of some of the lads to the favorite bathing lake across the harbor makes it timely to suggest that in addition to the efforts of the Swimming Club to improve the facilities at the lake, some organized effort should be made to have all the school children of the city taught to support themselves in the water. This is the time for a campaign along those lines if it is to succeed. There will be facilities soon. Behind it must be the co-operation of the whole people toward enthusing the young people to take part and learn this useful art.
