DAILY EDITION. Saturday, May 10, 1919.

Welcome to Returning Heroes.

A few days ago we were able to publish a summary of the peace treaty which is being imposed upon Germany. This was made possible through the sacrifices of men some of whom are returning here tomorrow. Through their splendid work we are in the position of victors instead of feeling the heel of the Hun on our necks.

Prince Rupert people fully realize the obligation they owe to the gallant men who fought for them overseas. They also recognize that every private who went did just as much as the officers. In giving special recognition to Colonel Peck tomorrow it is not because he is an officer, but because he has won the greatest of honors, the Victoria Cross. Equally with him will the people recognize the services of Captain John McGregor who also won the same recognition, with the added distinction of having risen from the ranks.

What makes the recognition of Colonel Peck perhaps more distinctive is the fact that he is well known, that a large number of Prince Rupert men served under him, and that in doing so they found that the Colonel was a democrat in office just as he was in private life. He treated his men well and they respect and revere him for it. He is their hero.

If it should happen that the Colonel gets a little more recognition than others it is partly because of the facts already mentioned and partly because he is personally so well known and so popular, and because he is the member for the constituency in the Dominion Parliament.

All Will Join In the Greeting.

The News is glad to join with the rest in honoring the brave men who are returning. Had it been we who were forced to sign a dictated treaty, there would have been a sad tale to tell. The burden which the Huns are being forced to bear would be as nothing to the burdens which would have been forced on us. Sad to say many have had to sacrifice their lives for the cause of freedom. Others have lost limbs or have been otherwise incapacitated. We cannot escape from the debt we owe them. None recognize it more than we do.

Tomorrow there will be no holding back on the part of anyone. All will welcome the heroes. All will greet the men who are going south but who come this way with the Colonel.

Aeroplanes for Saving Life at Sea.

Dr. S. F. Tolmie, the member for Victoria, B. C., in the House of Commons during a recent discussion on aeronautics drew attention to the possibilities of the use of planes in saving life at sea.

The News suggests that the Dominion Department of Marine might work in conjunction with the Provincial forest patrol service. One or two water planes might be kept ready for use in connection with the prevention of forest fires and also be used to save life at sea.

It is just possible that until such time as passengers are carried in the air instead of on the water, Hydroplanes may be of great use in rescuing people from wrecks such as that of the Princess Sophia. Just how it is to be done is for the air men and engineers to work out, but there seems to be a possibility in that direction. The air plane must become more than a toy. It is bound to enter into the daily life of the people in the future, to an extent not yet dreamed of.
