Prince Rupert Honors Men Who Fought for Her.

Prince Rupert people did honor to themselves in honoring last night the brave men who did their fighting for them against the Huns on the many battlefields of Europe. It was a very great occasion, one to be remembered. Seldom have the people here turned out in such numbers or displayed so much enthusiasm. There never was such an occasion before and it is probable that there will never be another.

Every household was represented and every man was there. Ladies too in large numbers were present and added much to the gaiety of the scene and to the enjoyment of the occasion.

It is a great satisfaction to the local people to feel that they were able to show their appreciation of the splendid men, and it must have been satisfactory to the men to feel that their efforts on our behalf had been appreciated.

It is seldom that such unanimity of purpose is shown as was that yesterday. There was but one thing in the minds of everyone and that was to honor the men who had fought our battles.

If the Opposite Had Happened.

In the enjoyment of the occasion it was not appropriate to think of what might have been instead of the celebration which was held yesterday. In looking back at it today, however, it is impossible to get away from the thought of the condition had a German guard marched up from the station instead of Peck's men, had the citizens been summoned to meet their new masters in the Exhibition Building, had German warships sailed into Prince Rupert and squads of German marines marched through the streets, and citizens and their wives and daughters been bound to step off the sidewalks into the mud to allow the German officers to pass, and from that vantage point to give them a servient salute under pain of punishment for refusal.

When it is considered how near at one time we came to having such a condition thrust on us, and how it was nothing but the bravery of these men who returned and others like them who saved us from the terrible prospect, it makes us not so much jubilant as thankful to the men who saved us from so trying an ordeal.

All Our Liberties Due to Military.

There is an inclination in certain quarters to feel that there was nothing to be gained by fighting, because the people of Germany are just as democratic as are we. That may be true of the people generally now, but it would not have been true had German militarism been triumphant. Without the crushing of that force there would have been no republic of Germany or of Hungary, there would instead have been a military despotism of the most crushing kind which would have extended itself to almost every portion of the globe, and especially to Canada. Here on the Pacific coast we should have suffered more than anywhere else for the warships would have taken possession and the drunken Germans would have been singing "Deutschland Über Alles" and insulting our women along the streets. A German burgomaster would have dictated our civic policy, and German would have been a compulsory language in our schools. There would have been no liberty then to form a One Big Union or to refuse to do it if the Germans so ordered. We have escaped, and Peck and his men and others like him were the only ones that made escape possible.
