SUCCESS OF CONFERENCE

Undoubtedly the Imperial Economic Conference at Ottawa has been a success, although it is difficult to say today just how great the success has been. At any rate all the parties to the agreements seem to be satisfied and that is a great thing. An agreement cannot last unless every party to it benefits. As has been impressed upon Premier Bennett from time to time, Canada had to be willing to give as well as take.

Premier Bennett seems to have carried his main point as laid down at the previous conference and his action at that time has been justified by the outcome of the present gathering. He has been abundantly boosted as the one man who has carried Canada through a difficult crisis. Time will tell whether or not he was right. We hope he is.

GOOD PUBLICITY

The publicity on the principal news page of the London Times in regard to Prince Rupert and the leading pictures on the illustrated page showing the city and trolling boats is publicity that cannot be purchased. It came to Prince Rupert as a result of the recent visit of the tour organized through B. C. House in London under the provincial government and was partly the result of the efforts of the local Chamber of Commerce in looking after the visitors and seeing that they were given a good time while in the city. That publicity was worth as much as the total cost of the Chamber of Commerce to the city and most of the expense of the chamber is borne by the members who pay to it annual dues in addition to giving a great deal of time free of charge. It is public service work that counts in the long run.

While everyone knows it is difficult to meet payments of any kind in these difficult days, it is very desirable that the Chamber of Commerce should be continued as a live institution and the more members there are, the better it can function.

At Santa Monica Celebration

Rudy Vallee's father-in-law on war path? No, C. E. Webb is just playing big chief in Santa Monica's pioneer days celebration. It's quite all right, too, 'cause he is really police chief of his home town.

QUEEN CHARLOTTE CITY IS TODAY BEAUTIFUL WITH FLOWERS, AND LIFE ON ISLANDS MUCH IMPROVED OF LATE.

large number of them take the Daily News and they discussed freely with me the governmental policies and other news which came to them through this source, often the only source so far as Canadian news is concerned. All expressed the wish that they could be more closely connected with Prince Rupert by means of a better boat service but they realized the difficulty owing to the present paucity of population. What they are hoping for is that the mineral and other development which they see coming will make such a change that a better service will be justified.

It was at Charlotte that the suggestion was made that there might be a new government policy which would help them very considerably. This was the repopulation of the deserted farms on the islands which they claim is justified under present conditions. They say there are today many farms on the east coast and up the Miller River which were deserted during war days to which the people have never returned. Some of these have reverted to the Crown and if an effort were made they could be once more settled. On some of these places there are good houses or small shacks and from one to five acres of land cleared. The first thing to be done would be to make a detailed survey of the situation and then advertise the farms as available for settlers who were willing to take them and make definite improvements.

At the time when the farms were given up the place was so isolated that life there became almost unbearable. Today radios are available. The homes can be connected with the island telephone system and here are good roads over which they can soon reach any of the centres or visit with neighbors. That changes the settlement problem to such an extent that today no farm need be badly isolated or without entertainment. The radio reception is better on the islands than it is at Prince Rupert.

The road connecting Charlotte with Skidegate, Tlell and Port Clements is a very good one considering its age and the number of people it serves. It might be better in some sections but cars make fairly good time over it and there is no danger in driving over it in the summer. During winter it doubtless becomes rutty and possibly dangerous. It is a very picturesque drive. An example of its value was seen in an incident which came to my notice while I was there.

Ambrose Collison, a fisherman, had engine trouble when trolling off North Island. He brought his boat into Massett and from there telephoned to Skidegate for someone to meet him at Port Clements. The car was waiting for him when he arrived. He drove through to his home at Skidegate, repairs were made and he was soon back at the Port with his boat once more in good condition.

Life is altogether different on the Islands today from what it was on my previous visit nine years ago and those wishing to make a home where climatic conditions are excellent and where the people have almost everything except frequent boat service with the outside, could not do better than investigate the Islands and particularly the deserted farms on the East coast.

Three-Game Series Arranged to Commence Wednesday Night; Canucks Confident

Sons of Canada, who for the third successive year, have copped the city baseball championship, have issued a challenge to any team in the city for a game or series of games, so that they may demonstrate that it is not all luck which has made them winners again this year. Accordingly, at a meeting of the executive of the Prince Rupert Baseball Association on Saturday night, it was arranged to have the champions take on an all-star team from the Elks and Empress teams for a three-game series. The series will open on Wednesday night of this week and be continued on Friday. The final game is scheduled for next Monday. Benny Windle has been appointed manager of the All-Stars and he feels certain that they will at last be able to down the "lucky Sons."

Worm Army Goes In Straight Line

Many Saskatchewan Towns Have Had Amazing Visitations

BROADVIEW, Sask., Aug. 22.—Armies of sugar-beet webworms recently passed through a number of Saskatchewan towns, and have been seen in all sections of the province in amazing numbers this year. These worms, or caterpillars, do not eat wheat and barely touch oats and barley. But when an army passes through a grain field it will clean out every weed except those of the grass family. They like garden truck, however, and have done considerable damage to gardens. The worms evidently march in a straight line and cannot be deflected from their course. When they come to a house or barn they crawl up the wall and over the roof and continue their journey.

Port Simpson Baseball Nine Wants to Meet Best Team in City During Fair

The Port Simpson baseball team has issued a challenge to meet the best nine Prince Rupert can put on the field, the game or games to take place in Prince Rupert during the fair week.

Port Simpson is reported to have developed some snappy players and they say they do not want to make any second rate team. They think they can lower the odds of anything Prince Rupert can produce.

The Intermediates are considering the challenge.

GOLF TOURNAMENT TO BE PLAYED AT SMITHERS

Editor, Daily News.—You might be interested to know that the Smithers Golf Club are planning to hold an Annual Golf Tournament. This tournament will be known as the "Northern B.C. Columbia Amateur Open Golf Tournament," to be played over 18 holes, and will be open to men in Northern B.C. The tournament will be played on Monday, September 18. A medal will be presented to the winner which will be kept by him for one year but should a player win three times in succession he will keep it. A prize will be given to the runner-up. All entries must be in the hands of H. G. Houghton, Smithers, B.C., not later than September 11.

This is a new venture in the world of sports in the north. Although our course is only 27 holes, visitors are finding that they have to play a better game than what the course at first looks like. We have good fairways, greens, natural bunkers and traps. Our par for 18 holes is 62 and so far no one has made it.

It is hoped that this tournament will become a yearly success. We will, as time goes on, be able to increase our course to nine holes.

If you have any golfing friends please let them know. I can assure you that they will enjoy themselves. There will be no entrance fee.

Yours very truly,
H. G. HOUGHTON
Captain, Smithers Golf Club.
