HUSBAND HUNTER AT EMPRESS THEATRE

"The Husband Hunter," with Eileen Percy in the title role, is a brilliant comedy bordering at times on farce. The story is of a young girl who sets out to capture the love of a man she has never seen.

Eileen Percy enacts the role of Myra Hastings, the young woman in question. When the story opens Myra's plan to win Kent Whitney is well under way. A storm forces Myra and Whitney into a deserted house in the woods and results in the couple being quarantined, they being informed that scarlet fever had existed in the shack. Rather than expose Myra to any possibility of being compromised Kent proposes and, of course, is accepted.

Then comes Bob Harkness, a former suitor of Myra, who loses no time in informing his friend Whitney that his wife-to-be is a famous husband hunter. Then the two concoct a scheme to show Myra in her true colors—and from this point the fun of the play runs riot.

PROHIBITION.

Editor Daily News:

The supporters of prohibition are of the impression that their method of dealing with the liquor question is a short-cut to total abstinence, and owing to the misery due to the excessive use thereof, in their view there is only one remedy, to prohibit its use and manufacture. Seemingly, and in theory a reasonable cure, but in actual fact a failure because for many reasons it will not stay prohibited. But as the word fascinates, and the remedy seems so certain, the bait is often swallowed.

Creates Opposition.

The principal cause for its failure is due to the fact that it creates too much opposition. It shows an utter disregard for the rights of the individual and rides rough-shod over the natural laws and lands nowhere. It has the greatest faith in the efficacy of the law to make its scheme a success, and adds vindictive enforcement clauses and unreasonable penalties to its act in order to assure such.

But this method has an entirely different effect than that expected, in that only degenerate stool-pigeons and paid minions volunteer evidence and the consequence is that on the whole there are not five per cent of the violations dealt with, hence its inevitable failure. When so many persons are found that will pay such exorbitant prices for liquor that are paid today there is shown a deep-seated habit which is beyond the ability of the individual to control, and this coupled with the inherent inclination to possess things forbidden, creates a situation that is worthy of the most serious and intelligent consideration to cope with. Yet prohibition aims to destroy this with one fell blow, and as should be expected fails.

The only successful plan in dealing with such requires a weaning process by well thought out temperance methods. It believes in amending its act and lightening the law in order to secure its enforcement, but overlooks the fact that those who wish to defeat it are not slow in perfecting methods of successful evasion.

Illicit Manufacture.

Bone-dry is the salvation now, but this prohibits importation of the product only, and not always that, and permits the ingredients to come in without restrictions, hence the problem of illicit and private manufacture and the questionable success of this scheme.

There is a certain class that have made heavy investments, which sustain considerable loss by reason of the introduction of such reform measures, and have a high moral right to compensation for such, on the ground that when a community initiates a reform for its benefit, then such community as a whole should bear the expense in connection therewith, and not a few members thereof. Yet when prohibition was enforced here its sponsors in their day of triumph refused to recognize the right of such interests to indemnification, which has been done elsewhere, but when the day of reckoning came, and it went down to defeat and virtual oblivion, they no doubt felt the effect of an organized opposition they had previously ignored.

This organized opposition to temperance movements should be removed by agreement and payment of damages made, otherwise nothing but failure can be expected, as witness all such movements in the past that have fallen before this force. Look to the prairies where bone-dry obtains, which is already being attacked and sooner or later must fall. In case of government sale such awards could become a first charge on the profits thereof, but with prohibition there is no revenue, but that which goes to the doctor and bootlegger and they do not seem disposed to share it.

Has Done Good.

Prohibition has done a service in causing an awakening to the necessity of the suppression of intemperance, and still stands as a distinct threat against a policy advocated by some of permitting the use of liquor as free as water, and of others, of a system of delivering to many a quantity of liquor greater than they can safely handle, and thereby placing a premium upon intoxication.

WILL ARRANGE SUMMER RUNS

Superintendent Beaumont and Mr. McNicholl Going to Confer with Captain Nicholson

Reginald Beaumont, superintendent of G.T.P. steamers, and G. A. McNicholl, assistant general freight and passenger agent, are leaving by the Prince George tomorrow night for Vancouver to go into conference with Capt. C. H. Nicholson, manager of the fleet, and other officials for the purpose of arranging this summer's services of the company's steamers.

Mr. Beaumont hopes that all the five vessels, Prince Rupert, Prince George, Prince Albert, Prince John and Lorne, will again be operating before long and it is expected that a service for each vessel will be announced as a result of the conference. The Prince Rupert will be back in service next month while the George undergoes a brief overhaul. The Prince Albert is overhauled and is running again and as soon as a service is found for her the John will be painted at the dry dock here and also released for service. The Lorne is tied up at the local dock.

Pulp Shipments

The pulp shipments between here and Swanson Bay during the past winter have been very intermittent and at the present time only about four shipments a month are passing through this port. The Whalen company is attending to the towing of the car barge with its own tug now, but as soon as the plant is in full operation again and the shipments to the United States on the Eastern market increase it will be necessary to find another tug exclusively for this work. The Grand Trunk Pacific is ready at any time to handle the increased shipping. The running of the Dollar boats to Swanson Bay will not have any effect on the shipment of pulp through here for the Eastern market.

CALIFORNIA FROSTS INJURE RAISIN CROP

FRESNO, April 6.—There have been severe frosts in this part of California. Raisin growers may lose ten million dollars as a result of damage to the crop this year from the drop in temperature.

At the regular monthly meeting of the Independent Association held last night the proposal for the division of B. C. into two provinces at the 52nd parallel was endorsed. The association also endorsed the proposal to have a survey made of Cameron Cove with a view to its dredging by the Dominion Government.
