ESSAY WRITTEN
ABOUT ENGLANDHumorist with Strong Scottish
Leanings Takes Shot at Southern Appendage

Most of the jokes that are printed and told have to do with either Ireland or Scotland. The jokesters say that the English are too serious to appreciate a joke about themselves. To test the truth, the following contributed essay is published:

The Essay

"England is a small plot of land appended to the south of Scotland and is particularly unfortunate in that it was lost to the United States through the War of Independence.

"The language was formerly noted for the facility it afforded for the expression of thought, and a fair sample is still extant in the ancient works of Shakespeare. Three dialects mainly survive, viz., Cockney, Yorkshire and Billingsgate.

"The principal exports are iron, coal (when the miners think fit to mine it), cotton goods and emigrants. The latter chiefly to Canada, the Scots and other foreigners having driven them out. The country is very rich in relics of a bygone civilization, the most noted being the Lord Mayor of London.

"What government is left in the country is permeated by outside influence; for many years its national aspirations have been stifled by pressure from the

Like a Tidal Wave
Heart Disease and Nerve
Troubles Sweep the Country.

Properly at no period in the world's history have heart and nerve troubles been so prevalent as they are today.

"The heart can't stand the stress and strain of this busy, bustling age, and the care and worry, the anxiety and activity of business life constitute a serious drain on the nervous system.

The business of this work-a-day world goes with such a rush that the stoutest hearts and strongest nerves break down under the strain.

On one first approach of any breakdown of the system, the heart and nerve pills should be taken. The reconstructive power of these pills on the heart and nerve system is simply marvelous.

Mr. W. A. Wright, Hopewell Avenue, Ottawa, Ont., writes: "After suffering for some time with my heart, I consulted a number of doctors, but got no relief. However, I read what Mr. Wright's Heart and Nerve Pills had done for others, who had the same symptoms and thought I would give them a trial. Believe me, six boxes relieved me. I am feeling fine now, and can attend to my work every day. I can recommend your pills to any one suffering as I did."

"The climate has nothing to recommend it except its changeability and the fact that there is a perpetual east wind, either going or returning.

Gross Stupidity

"The natural characteristics of its people are a gross stupidity and a lack of self-interest, combined with an inordinate assumption of superiority, the latter probably engendered by the defeat of Napoleon and the Kaiser—with apologies to the United States.

"In connection with the above, you may recall that I have once or twice made reference to Ian Hay's book, 'The Oppressed English,' and the following clipping which is apparently taken from an English paper, so exactly sums up the gist of his short volume that I make no apologies for presenting it to your kind attention.

Scotch Rule England

"A Scotchman knows how to handle the English to perfection. His method baffles them at every turn. They poke fun at him and hold up his racial characteristics to ridicule, but it never worries him for a moment. Deep in his heart he knows which breed is the salt of the earth and no trumpery externals or trivial chatter can down solemn conviction.

"Who ever hears the Scotchman clamoring for Home Rule? They much prefer to rule England. The percentage of high offices in government and business filled by able men from beyond the border is amazing. For that matter, writes George Pattullo in 'The Saturday Evening Post,' it is the same everywhere that hardy breed has gone. A glance over the names of the men who control industry in the United States, Canada and Australia will suffice to substantiate this statement.

Scottish Humor

"The story goes that a Scotchman had occasion to visit England. On his return a friend asked how he had hit it off with the English.

"'Didna meet wi' any.'

"'Mon, what is that you say? Not in a Lunnon?'

"'Aye, Sandy, aye. I talked only wi' the heids o' business.'
