Missionary Was Great Student of Languages.

The death of Rev. J. B. McCullagh, the pioneer missionary of the Naas River, removes one of the picturesque characters of the coast, a missionary who was responsible for the Christianizing of many of the natives and who was a keen student of the languages of the Indians.

Mr. McCullagh discovered that many of the words used by the Indians were closely related to the Hebrew and other languages of western Asia, some being identical. From that he traced the origin and spread of those languages and came to the conclusion that the natives here must have originally come from stock closely related to the western Asiatic. Mr. McCullagh could talk for hours on this his favorite theme and some of his discoveries were startling.

Much interest was taken in England in Mr. McCullagh's language studies and had he been able to return to that country and put his discoveries into writing, they would have been a valuable addition to the scientific works on the subject of philology.

Mr. McCullagh was an expert amateur printer and took great pride in some of the little magazinelets he had published from his own hand press at Aiyansh.

The death of Mr. McCullagh is a distinct loss to British Columbia and to the scientific world. He was a man with vision, seeing in his mind's eye the fertile Naas Valley inhabited by thousands of settlers living there in the lap of luxury from the production of the soil. He was a great believer in the north country and its future prosperity. His work will have a lasting effect on the future of the province.

Experimental Farm Need of Interior.

The Dominion Government has been establishing some experimental observation stations in the interior where the farmers will grow certain crops under observation and will receive aid from the Dominion in doing so. This is the first interest taken by the Dominion in the country.

What the farmers want, however, is an experimental farm that will be in charge of an expert where crops will be grown under observation and definite instruction given to settlers, and soils analyzed. There are already such farms at Agassiz and Saanich but conditions here are quite different and the farms in the south are of no value to Central British Columbia.

The establishment of observation stations is a recognition of the need, but it does not fill the bill. The farmers there should press for the larger institution where they may secure that aid which is given to farmers in other parts of the country.

Experimental Fishing Station.

There are experimental farms for farmers in various parts of the country but experimental stations for fishermen are also needed. The marine and fishery department is controlled by the Dominion but so far they have not recognized that there are fisheries in these waters, except in regard to salmon or in the matter of placing taxes on the fishermen.

The time is coming when the halibut will be much scarcer than it is today. Looking toward this time, an experimental station could undertake the work of locating new halibut banks, of experimenting with other food fishes and of giving publicity to the values of fish foods. There might also be in connection with it a school for fishermen where the latest methods would be taught combined with scientific data which would prove of value to the fishermen. There seems no reason why the fishermen should not get as much attention as the farmer, especially in view of the fact that the lands belong to the province whereas the fisheries belong to the Dominion.

GIVES UP MONEY LIVES IN BARN

Member of British House of Commons would Avert Danger

HYDE, Eng., May 2.—Austin Hopkinson, a member of the House of Commons, has just given to the local governing council of Hyde his mansion, valued at $150,000 and 20 other houses and he has gone to live in an old barn that was once a part of his estate. He has taken this action because he believes that a manifestation of the spirit of self-sacrifice on the part of public servants would avert danger of a revolution in England.

Mr. Hopkinson's other deeds of generosity include the disposal of his furniture to friends and the needy, partly by sale at bargain prices and partly by free gift. He gave his handsome automobile to his chauffeur. The latter has now started in business with it. His former employer, the donor of the machine, is one of his best customers.

Simple Life

To questioners, Mr. Hopkinson has said his intention was to live the life of a simple workingman and to help others as much as possible. In his own workshops, he has introduced a profit-sharing system that is without precedent, inasmuch as the higher the yield the less he receives, and after a certain sum is reached, he is to receive nothing at all.

During the war Hopkinson was an officer. He was discharged as unfit, but rejoined as a private.

NEW GOVERNMENT BUILDINGS WILL BE COMMODIOUS

Substantial Two Storey Brick Building with Concrete Basement

The new provincial government building here is being built on very similar plans to those that were sent out last November. It will house all the government offices, such as forestry, land registry, provincial police, jail, public works and, most important of all, the law courts with an adequate court room. The land registry office will be especially commodious and proper provision will be made for the safe keeping of deeds which in the present building on Second Avenue is none too secure.

Two Storeys Brick

The building will be a substantial structure of two storeys and basement. It will be built of brick with concrete foundations and will have a massive appearance. On the basement floors will be the boiler rooms and the police offices. The office of the government agent, land registrar, assessor, district forester and school inspector will on the main floor, while the second floor will be devoted almost entirely to court accommodation. The court room will be a handsome one, finished with fine appointments.

LIGHTHOUSE TENDER COMING NORTH SOON

New Vessel, Which Will Supplement Newington, Leaves for Digby Island Wednesday.

The new lighthouse tender that has been built at Point Hope yard of the B. C. Yacht & Boat Builders, Ltd., for service out of this port has been completed and will leave Victoria on Wednesday for the north to take up her work with the Newington working out of the Digby Island station.

The boat has been named the Birnie after Birnie Island in northern B. C. waters. It was specially designed for the coast service and will be largely used in the recharging of buoys and beacons supplementing the services of the Newington in cases where it will not be necessary to send out the steamer.

The new vessel is 75 feet long and is equipped with a 100 h. p. Canadian Fairbanks-Morse marine oil engine.

A similar vessel, the Berens, was built by the Marine Department at the same time. It will be used out of the Victoria depot.

The time used is Pacific Standard, for the 120th Meridian west. It is counted from 0 to 24 hours, from midnight to midnight.

The table given is for Port Simpson but the time for Prince Rupert varies only a few minutes on some days and on others is the same. The range of the tide may be computed as 5 per cent greater at Prince Rupert than at Port Simpson both at springs and neaps. Therefore the rise in the Prince Rupert harbor is slightly greater than Port Simpson.

The height is in feet and tenths of feet above the average level of lower low water.
