KIDD REPORT AGAIN

There seems to be a lot of valuable information contained in the Kidd report which it would have been difficult to secure in any other way because the government refused to allow anyone else access to the official documents which they examined. For that reason we may be thankful for it. So far only highlights have been published but doubtless soon we shall all have an opportunity of seeing it.

The Tolmie Government can take little comfort from the report. So far as can be gathered, it is a complete argument against members of that government holding any dominant position in any new administration that may be formed. We predict that any government dominated by the present group, no matter under what name it may masquerade, would be doomed to defeat. The only person who stands out head and shoulders above the rest as capable of bringing back prosperity to the province is the natural leader whom some Vancouver interests are trying to sidetrack.

What we need today is a return to sane administration under a capable leader. That leader is undoubtedly T. D. Pattullo. He helped in the work of rehabilitating the province in 1916 and since then his experience makes him doubly valuable. In spite of the hysterical attempts to sidetrack him at Vancouver, the people of the province will, we feel sure, see that he is appointed to salvage the resources of the country and bring back much needed prosperity.

GET RID OF POLITICS

There are many people who think the country should get rid of politics. We agree, if they refer to political patronage. It has been the bane of all governments. It has meant that the public expenditures of any party are made through people or firms favorable to their administration. Mackenzie King made an effort to get rid of party patronage by appointing a civil service commission. This affected appointments but not ordinary expenditures. No one hates patronage so much as the decent politician but it is a difficult matter to deal with. A solution should be found but we do not think it will be by means of a businessman's government.

WORK FOR RAILWAYS

The grain movement will not only make work for the seniority trainmen, as stated yesterday by Senator James Murdoch, but will also give employment to hundreds of others directly or indirectly. Prince Rupert will benefit from the grain shipments made through the port, the first of which is expected to arrive here within the next couple of weeks. Other ships will follow and it is not improbable that there may be a considerable grain movement through the port. It is only at a time like this that we learn to appreciate how important to the port is the elevator and the grain business.

MESSAGES OF LEADERS OF LABOR IN DOMINION GIVEN TO ALL WORKERS

ment of the shorter work-day and work-week in order to overcome the displacement of man power by machinery and thus more equitably distribute the opportunities for employment. It seeks to increase purchasing power by reducing interest rates on public loans, restoring wage levels and raising prices which the farmer receives for his produce.

"Labor seeks the development of our rich heritage of natural resources for the benefit of the community and not for the enrichment of the few and by securing the enactment of social legislation to modify the severity of the economic struggle for the aged and infirm and give protection to children and youths so as to ensure to them a fair and equal opportunity to become worthy citizens.

"The record of trade unions in seeking to attain their objective only by constitutional methods warrants support and co-operation of all other classes to the end that prosperity may be restored and comfort and happiness replace the misery and want which today exists in so many Canadian homes."

Mosher's Message

"A. R. Mosher, president, All-Canadian Congress of Labor, writes as follows: "The significance of Labor Day lies in the fact that it represents a recognition by the government of the existence of the workers of Canada, that large majority of the population who depend upon wages for a livelihood. In selecting the first Monday in September for this holiday, 38 years ago, the government followed the example of the United States, and it is notable that both countries lag far behind the other industrialized countries of the world in social legislation. The gesture of good-will towards the workers has remained an empty one.

"This official indifference reflects the industrial development of Canada and the United States, which is still in the stage of economic individualism, and which has been closely paralleled by Labor organization. The influence of United States unions is responsible to a considerable degree for the lack of political progress on the part of Canadian workers, and for their failure to protest more effectively against abuses of power and privilege.

"In recent years, however, the national labor movement has made great advances in membership and influence. It has taken an uncompromising stand in favor of economic and political reform, and the workers are turning to it with hope and enthusiasm. Their faith in the integrity and the intelligence of the owners of wealth has been destroyed by the evidence that, in a world of plenty, great masses of men and women are destitute, that unemployment is increasing, that commerce is paralyzed, and that their political and industrial leaders are perplexed and bewildered.

"There are many people who can be convinced only by established facts. Such people can no longer close their eyes to the defects of the present economic system, based on competitive private enterprise and motivated by the desire for profit. It is difficult to understand how sane and sympathetic individuals are able to defend this system, even where they are its beneficiaries, and the workers are getting ready to use their economic and political power in a concerted endeavor to hasten the evolution of a more equitable order.

"On Labor Day, 1932, when economic distress and social unrest are everywhere in evidence, it is essential the people of Canada should be aware the workers of this great country are taking stock of their position, and are resolving as never before to use their energies along the lines I have indicated. They are determined to put an end to the economic system responsible for the present paradox of poverty in the midst of plenty. Many obstacles lie ahead, but the goal is clearly seen, and they are mustering their forces for the forward march."

From P. M. Draper

P. M. Draper, secretary-treasurer, Trades and Labor Congress of Canada, says: "The year which has passed since last Labor Day was one long to be remembered in the annals of industrialized affairs. Unprecedented economic depression held all countries of the world and Canada experienced conditions not seen before. Though no section of the community escaped, unfortunately, as is always the case with these major economic disturbances, the heaviest toll was paid by the workers. From their ranks were recruited the large army of the unemployed, those who, after a brief interval in which scanty savings were rapidly exhausted, have become dependent upon public grants and private charities for the merest subsistence. One cannot contemplate their most unhappy situation without feeling that too little effort has been devoted to the problem of a more equitable distribution of industry's products, the solution of which would render as obsolete, as it should be unnecessary, the present spectacle of such widespread unemployment.

"Some few seek to capitalize the present situation to their own particular ends. There are those who, indulged in radical criticisms of the organization of industry and society, would substitute for it a state bordering on communism. These are the forces which would destroy, but they have yet to show their capability for the more difficult task of building. With little likelihood of their 'isms' being put to any practical test, they may be quite irresponsible, turning all evidence of the unhappy lot of many of the people into arguments in favor of a semi-chaotic condition. From these people the workers can hope for nothing except further misery. Then on the other hand there are those who adopt the attitude that absolutely no change must be made in the present economic organization, together with those who even seek to profit at the expense of the misfortunes of the victims of the depression. Fundamental changes in our present economic conceptions are demanded by the present situation, and those who would oppose such changes as common justice dictates are anti-social; their attitude as are the propagandists of radicalism."

British Aviator Sails For England From Quebec Today Aboard Empress of Britain From Sydney Guided Himself With Railway Map—He and Amy to Visit Canada In Near Future

QUEBEC, Sept. 3.—The Gypsy Moth seaplane in which Capt. James A. Mollison recently crossed the Atlantic Ocean in a westerly direction having served its purpose for the present, it was crated for passage back to England aboard the steamer Empress of Britain today, the same vessel on which Capt. Mollison himself embarked for home.

Mollison flew to Quebec Thursday from Sydney in slightly over seven hours. He left Sydney with only a map torn from a railway time table to give him his bearings and landed in a field on the south side of the St. Lawrence River when he was unable to identify the local airport. He then used his limited knowledge of French to the best of his ability to get directions for a take-off which landed him here. He received official greetings of the city yesterday.

Flyer Is Toasted Representatives of the civic and provincial governments, business men and staff of the steamer Empress of Britain, on which he sailed today for London, gathered at dinner last night and toasted Capt. Mollison. Mollison announced that he and his wife, Amy Johnson, famous British aviatrix, would visit Canada in about two months' time "to renew old friendships."
