CHICAGO WOMEN POLICE SEW MORE SUIT ON BATHERS!

CHICAGO, June 23.—Censors at the bathing beaches in Chicago, just now densely populated with gay crowds, have solved the problem of dealing with girls who are a trifle shy on clothing. Last year the matter was left to the conscience of the bather, but it was discovered that some of them had no conscience at all or one composed of gutta serena, so something had to be done about it.

Some of the beach queens were getting down to the fig leaf proposition and fig leaves this season are quite small. Consequently there was a grand display of legs and arms and spinal column and shoulders and patella and torso to say the least.

The police censors, men and women, who patrol the beach, have solved the problem in a delicate way. The women police go armed with needle and thread and when a girl is discovered tastily clad in a G-string and a light sprinkling of tan, the copess takes her to one side and sews on a fringe. Skirts that leave off at the hips where they really should begin, are let down and arm holes are deftly tacked up by the women police and the wearers are warned to put on something more than a dash of talcum powder when they next come to the beach.
