Must Prepare Soon For Season of Sport.

It is now time to begin preparations for the summer sports. Yesterday's warm sunshine brought out many ball players with their gloves and balls hardening their hands a little in preparation for the early games. Announcement has been made of a football match for Friday and from now on, whenever the weather is suitable, there will be young people enjoying outdoor sports and games.

With the shipbuilding proceeding apace and with the opening up of other work in the early spring, there should be no difficulty in getting a number of teams in every line of sport and the summer games should, as a result, be just as successful as those of the past winter.

Austen Chamberlain Leader of Commons.

The appointment of Right Hon. Austen Chamberlain as leader of the House of Commons in Great Britain is significant of the trend of the times. Chamberlain is a commoner without any signs of blue blood in his veins. His father made his money from manufacturing screws at Birmingham and for many years had strong radical tendencies. His son Austen is 58 years of age and has for many years been one of the leaders of the Unionist party. Lately he has held the position of Chancellor of the exchequer under Lloyd George, a position he held also from 1903 to 1905. He has held other important cabinet positions such as civil lord of the admiralty, financial secretary to the treasury, postmaster general and secretary of state for India.

Austen Chamberlain resembles his father in personal appearance and he also affects a monocle, a habit which rather sets him apart from the common people and tends to harm him in his political career. He is, however, an able man and should make a mark in his present position, which is acknowledged to be the most difficult in the Government of the day.

All Anxious for Work to Proceed.

All are anxious for work on the new government buildings to proceed as quickly as possible, but time must be given for the contractors to make up their figures. Undoubtedly the rushing of the contract was a departmental error, for it is evident to everyone that tenders could not be made up in ten days on a building as large and complex as that to be erected here. Some opponents of the present administration fancy they see in it an attempt to do sleight of hand work but in this they are undoubtedly mistaken. The Board of Trade has taken the matter up and it will certainly be righted as soon as attention is drawn to it.

The work on the court house will be most important and will give quite a flip to building here this year. It, along with the new school building, will make for stability, and will show those who may have been hanging back, that this is really to be an important centre and that it will be in order to build for the future.

Daylight Saving Being Adopted.

Daylight saving is being adopted by many of the cities of Canada in order to get in line with the railways which have decided to adopt the scheme. In Prince Rupert those who are interested in sport would like to have the clocks put forward an hour in order that matches might be played in the evening. Others argue that in this northern latitude there is enough daylight anyway and if the clocks are put forward, the children lose much of the sleep which should be theirs.

We are inclined to favor daylight saving, but it is a debatable point and is worthy of careful consideration before being adopted.

PRINCE RUPERT TIDES

Thursday, March 14.
High, 1:36 a.m., 22.3 feet.
13:58 p.m., 21.7 feet.
Low, 7:53 a.m., 2.5 feet.
20:6 a.m., 3.4 feet.

Friday, March 25.
High, 2:16 a.m., 22.5 feet.
14:11 p.m., 21.2 feet.
Low, 8:33 a.m., 2.4 feet.
20:42 p.m., 4.3 feet.

The time used is Pacific Standard, for the 120th Meridian west. It is counted from 0 to 24 hours, from midnight to midnight.

The table given is for Port Simpson but the time for Prince Rupert varies only a few minutes on some days and on others is the same. The range of the tide may be computed as 5 per cent greater at Prince Rupert than at Port Simpson both at springs and neaps. Therefore the rise in the Prince Rupert harbor is slightly greater than Port Simpson.

The height is in feet and tenths of feet above the average level of lower low water.

LIQUOR QUESTION.

Editor Daily News:—

In respect to the use of liquor, the world seems to swing from one extreme to another, consequently those who wish the enactment of a so-called bone dry law could employ no better method for attaining this end than by advocating the free use of liquor and without proper restrictions.

In the recent plebiscite the alternative to prohibition contained what seemed to be two distinct conditions—government control and sale in sealed packages. Government control now seems to mean anything that suits the purpose of the party interested, and it looks as though this time it did not find its way into the proposals inadvertently. The sealed package was an unknown quantity and the sale of liquor for profit was not hinted at before the election.

Outside Pale.

There is no doubt many took it for granted that the sale of intoxicants would be by the government only, in sealed packages, and without profit, except that sufficient to carry on the operation and enforcement of the act. Along such lines it might be considered a temperance measure, but when the element of profit is added, which virtually means a lack of proper restrictions and pushing the sale thereof, it can then be placed outside the pale of moderation.

The sale of liquor in sealed packages only, containing a quart or more, must fail because such practices disregard the most essential principle of temperance, namely, placing in the hands of the individual at any one time a quantity not in excess of that which he can properly control, and it is a well understood fact that many persons could not come into possession of a quart of liquor without becoming the victim of an uncontrollable appetite. Yet this is exactly what sale in sealed packages only, means. The vote against prohibition cannot be construed to mean a repudiation of the principles of temperance, yet many proceed on this theory.

Source of Misery.

The bottle has in the past been the most fruitful source of misery—is today, and nothing better can be expected in the future. It has broken the back of prohibition and is likely to destroy the Liquor Control Act, and perhaps its sponsors.

Knowing, then, that the bottle contains a greater amount of liquor than many persons should be in possession of at any one time, there is only one practical method to pursue, that is, to limit the quantity to one glass at a time, and to require that the person be free from the influence of liquor and alone, in order to obtain it.

One Glass at Time.

The advantage of this plan can be easily seen as it could be practically applied, without the aid of freakish and unjust enforcement clauses, which have only one effect—that of disgusting the people and thereby rendering the act inoperative, because of no voluntary evidence being forthcoming. A government could at once exercise the exclusive right of sale irrespective of the importation problem and, from the standpoint of profit, would be more successful than by selling in sealed packages; and, as a comparison, it might be asked whether it would be more conducive to the cause of temperance to sell one glass at a time, than twenty or perhaps thirty enclosed in packages.

Discriminate.

But even in bone dry communities the sale of liquor in packages is resorted to, as it would have to be here in a limited sense for there are also many persons who are perfectly safe with the package, and such should not be denied this privilege, but the discrimination should be by reason of habit and ability to control the appetite, yet this method of sale should be discouraged as much as possible and no profit should be extracted therefrom, so as to make it possible to undersell the imported goods, thereby solving the problem of importation to a great extent. The amount sold under this plan should not exceed ten per cent of that under the scheme for exclusive sale in sealed packages, and the advantage of properly supervising such should be apparent, from the proportional amounts disposed of.
