TOM MOORE ON LABOR CAUSE

Tells Eastern People There is Open Warfare to Destroy Organizations.

OTTAWA, March 13.—There is no camouflage in regard to the war against organized labor in the United States," said Mr. Tom Moore, president of the Dominion Trades and Labor Congress, in an interview here. Mr. Moore has returned from a week spent in Washington, D. C., in conference with the leading labor men of the continent.

"It is open warfare," he continued. "Some employers state openly that their aim is to destroy the power of labor organizations."

TOM MOORE, President of Dominion Trades and Labor Congress, visits Washington.

This open warfare has caused more and more men to accept radical doctrines, and in consequence has made it more and more difficult for the regular labor movement in the United States to maintain proper relations between employer and employee.

While in Washington, Mr. Moore conferred with the executive of the American Federation of Labor and representatives of each of the national unions affiliated with the federation were present. The big question discussed was the war being waged by employers on organized labor and in favor of the open shop, and also the necessity of improving conditions by needed legislation.

What was specially noted was the vast sums of money spent by certain employers in newspaper and other advertising in the large newspapers of the country giving their version of the necessity for an open shop.

"The United States workers are, in my estimation, considerably worse off than the Canadian workers, insofar as the conditions they have established by legislation. The laws enacted for their protection in the past are, one by one, being decided against as unconstitutional by the courts. A recent instance of this is the Clayton Anti-Trust law. In fact very many important pieces of legislation enacted in the past for the protection of the workers have recently been declared unconstitutional and erased from the statute books."

WANT AURORA TO DOCK HERE

Board of Trade Telegraphs Hon. Mr. Callantyne, Peck and Capt. Hoss.

Following the dispatches published in this paper Saturday in regard to the docking of His Majesty's Canadian ship Aurora, the council of the Board of Trade held a meeting to discuss the situation. It was decided to telegraph Hon. C. G. Ballantyne, minister of marine; Col. Peck, member for the district, and Capt. Hoss, director of the Canadian Naval Service at Esquimalt. The wire to Mr. Ballantyne said:

"Advised Canadian naval ship Aurora desirous overhaul and dry-docking before leaving Pacific coast. Esquimalt dock too small, Rupert dock available. Will appreciate if you have ship come here rather than go to foreign dock."

In discussing the matter, the members of the Board of Trade expressed themselves as not being able to understand how the government could send the vessel to a foreign dock when their own was available here. It was mentioned that it was possible she would not need to dock, but if she did they could not conceive of her being sent to Seattle or San Francisco.
