Inspector Reviews Fishing Industry and Tells of Its Gradual Growth in District

The run of spring salmon to the Skeena River during April was most satisfactory and compared very favorably with that of last season, Inspector Williams of the Fisheries Department states. The gill net fishermen made good money; some secured as high as one ton for the 24 hours but the average was half a ton for the same time.

The salmon trollers also did exceedingly well during April, the average catch being about ten red springs per day. The fishing has now fallen off and averages about seven red springs and two whites, the trollers receive about fifteen cents dressed for reds and two cents for whites.

"This season will be the shortest that I have seen during my twenty-seven years' continuous service with the department owing to the fact that the Packers will only can sockeye, it being impossible at the price obtainable for the fall varieties to pack pinks and hums with a margin of profit to the canners," said Mr. Williams. "There is unquestionably at the present time a wave of depression, passing over the salmon canning business, but during my tenure of office I have seen similar waves of depression, I can remember three or four, but they passed away just as this depression will probably pass away in 1922 and normal conditions will again obtain. This depression affects the market for fall salmon and makes it impossible to pack them on a paying basis, but up to the present time it has not materially affected the sockeye."

Should be Good Run

"I look this season for a fair run of this variety, as the spawning grounds in 1917 were better seeded than in 1916, and last season the canners packed on the Skeena River 87,000 cases of sockeye. I am proud to be able to state that all varieties of salmon in District No. 2 are just as prolific and abundant as they were when I first entered the service twenty-seven years ago. This is not my opinion only, for it can be substantiated by statistics. It is a record that our Department may well be proud of and is attributable to the wise administration of the fisheries by the department and the rigid enforcement of the fisheries regulations, together with the assistance of the hatcheries. I think our fishery officers deserve some of the credit for this gratifying condition of our salmon fisheries and it is pleasing to know that they are nearly all local men living in the district. In fact this season we have not one gharidan, patrolman or gasolin' engine that does not reside in District No. 2 and in nearly every case they are re-

Growth of Industry.

"In early days when I first entered the service there were only six or seven canneries in the district, today there are approximately fifty and in spite of this drain on the salmon they are holding their own in point of numbers," said Mr. Williams, becoming reminiscent. "I remember well several years before Prince Rupert was even dreamt of, patrolling Tucks Inlet in connection with my work as inspector of fisheries. I always used to remark what a beautiful harbor Tucks Inlet would make, being entirely landlocked and deep water right up to the shoreline. Little did I think that I should live to see a fine city like Prince Rupert spring up out of the woods along the shores of Tucks Inlet. I was, however, a firm believer in the future of Prince Rupert. I was confident of its ultimate prosperity, consequently some of my friends and myself decided to buy some lots at the original auction some twelve years ago, (I speak from memory). It was a matter of speculation at that time where the centre of the city would be located but we were fortunate in our selections and today we own some of the finest property in Prince Rupert."

Urge to Buy Here.

"It has always been my earnest desire to assist in the advancement of Prince Rupert whenever it was possible to do so and with this end in view I urged the department to purchase all our supplies and requirements for our launches and offices locally whenever possible and our department cheerfully acceded to my request and today we purchase nearly all our supplies locally. Mr. Hutchinson is our local purchasing agent."

"I consider the fisheries in this district are in the most satisfactory and encouraging condition and I look forward with confidence, when this temporary wave of depression has passed, to another successful period for the salmon fisheries of British Columbia."
