ASK FOR DUTY ON FUEL OIL

Protectionists Would Make Cost of Operating Fish Boats Higher.

One of the latest and most daring indications of the length to which Tory advocates will go, is set forth in a special despatch from Victoria, B. C., to the Financial Post at Toronto. The correspondent of that paper writes that the owners of the Vancouver Island coal mines want protection against the invasion of the province by oil. They tell of the number of gallons of oil imported from California and suggest that if a duty was imposed on this, coal would be used more extensively and the mines on Vancouver Island would be kept busy.

Investigate First.

The local comment on the despatch is that any increase in the duty on fuel oil would increase the price of fuel oil to the fishermen of Prince Rupert and would practically put them out of business. Also it would tend to put up the price of coal which is at the limit already.

Local people who are interested in this business and who are supporting the Tory candidate are asked to investigate this matter before voting tomorrow.
