Mayor Carries Banner of Prince Rupert in Southern Cities and Taken for Member of Nobility

VICTORIA, Sept. 13.—Mayor Harry Rochester of Prince Rupert is busy here in the South giving information and collecting it. What Prince Rupert has, what Prince Rupert is and what she will be are points which he has been dealing with enthusiastically in his discussions with the people he has met since he left the northern town, but in addition to seeing that the truth is known about Rupert he has been picking up a great amount of information which will be valuable in his administrative work.

Mayor Rochester came south to attend the convention of the Union of B. C. Municipalities at Port Alberni, Vancouver Island. When seen by a representative of the Daily News at the Dominion Hotel here some days after the gathering he was exchanging anecdotes with two of his numerous Victoria friends.

Valuable Data. One of the big advantages of the convention, said the mayor, had been the opportunity provided for the securing of information relative to municipal matters. He had talked with the men in charge of municipal affairs in various parts of the Province at Port Alberni, securing valuable data.

The genial mayor was a popular figure at the convention where he became known as "Prince Rupert." Delegates there were astonished to learn that Prince Rupert had fish trains rolling out of his yards as often as it has, and there were other matters at which they expressed surprise when they were enlightened.

Right After It. Prince Rupert had decided to make a bid for the 1922 convention of the Union of B. C. Municipalities, not knowing the unwritten rule that the convention place alternated each year between the coast and the interior, and that therefore it was slated for an interior point next year. Mayor Rochester learned this when he reached the south, and when Kamloops was announced as the next convention town he rose to his feet in the convention hall and pointed out that when Prince Rupert had asked for the next convention it had not known about the method of allotment or it would not have made the application, but it would certainly like to get the 1923 convention. He then extended his congratulations to Kamloops.

Get It in 1923. The mayor's move was a popular one. That the convention appreciated the spirit of his remarks was evident from the applause that followed them, and afterward he was assured by various delegates that if Prince Rupert did not get the 1923 convention it would be no fault of theirs. Mayor Rochester is confident that the gathering will be held in his city the year after next. He told the convention that the delegates would find the water route to Prince Rupert the finest in North America.

Thought Him a Prince. The Provincial Government will be interviewed by Mayor Rochester on the question of getting the Skeena River highway from Prince Rupert started. He does not expect to return home for a short time yet, intending to visit Mainland points as far south as Spokane. He made the trip to Blaine for the opening of the peace arch on September 6, and it was not long before he was hailed as "Prince Rupert" by someone he had met at Port Alberni. The title raised the thought in the minds of some of the people within earshot that he was one of the nobility, one bystander being heard to remark that he was a prince because somebody had called him that.

The mayor is enthusiastic over the granite being used as road making material in Prince Rupert from the Smith Island quarry and he believes that the rock would be excellent for monumental and other purposes for which granite is used.
