Weather conditions in this vicinity at present are ideal and everyone hopes that it will continue fair until after the harvest. Threshing is now the order of the day. At present Mr. Rorison's outfit and a crew of fifteen men are operating on a fifty acre patch of oats belonging to Mr. Hope. Mr. Makins is next on the list, followed by J. P. Myers, and the end of the route will probably be Mr. Cambridge. Bumper crops are the rule this year all over the district.

Miss Ethel Titterton, who has been visiting relatives in Eastern Canada and has been away from the district for almost a year, has just arrived back. All her many friends welcomed her, because she is a real live wire, who will doubtless prove in the future, as she has in the past, a real asset to the social life of the community.

The regular meeting of "Our Club" was held in the new Public Hall on Thursday afternoon, September 29th, and it was reported that a substantial sum had been raised, on the Civic Holiday, towards cleaning off the cost of the building. Under the able leadership of Mrs. Bain, the ladies are planning many future attractions "For the Common Good."

At a meeting of the local branch of the Great War Veterans' Association, held on Saturday afternoon, October 1, it was unanimously agreed that the Government Agent, Fred Fraser, should attend, as their delegate, the forthcoming convention at Port Arthur.

Last week a wedding ceremony was conducted at the Maize. The bridegroom was Mr. William Schaefer, one of the pioneer settlers in the Nechaco Valley, and his bride was Miss Laura Hunt. The party, including Mr. and Mrs. Evans, relatives of the bride, motored from Vanderhoof. The officiating minister was Rev. Hugh Graham of the local Presbyterian Church.

GIRL IS INVENTOR.

VICTORIA, Oct. 5.—Caveat invention rights have been applied for by Miss Mary Gertrude Weston, aged 24, stenographer, on a device which, she claims, will simplify typewriters by having ready-made words of common usage on the machine. The words: "and," "that," "which" and similar common words are to appear on a separate row of keys, according to her blue print thus making typewriting almost as rapid as talking. Miss Weston was a war worker and yeomanette in the U. S. navy at Bremerton, Washington, during the war.

Victim—"This thermometer is no good. I can never tell by it how cold the room is." Dealer—"My dear madam, do you not know that the word 'thermometer' is derived from two Greek words meaning 'a measure of heat'?" Naturally, therefore, it isn't meant to measure cold."

TRADES UNION AND STRIKES

British Labor Gathering Deals with Many Subjects Including Disarmament.

The unruffled surface of the Trades Union Congress proceedings was disturbed a little today when the delegates came to discuss peace, says the London Times. The British "Reds," who, in Mr. J. H. Thomas's words advocate a "bloody revolution" in favor of peace, are adopting, superficially at all events, much more moderate language in their public utterances than formerly, but they contrived to say some very nasty things about the leaders of constitutional labor. These were returned with due interest by Mr. Thomas.

The mistiness of thought and policy which has characterized the pronouncements of the Congress hitherto was not materially clarified by the dispute, and the discussion was mainly notable for international labor unity in dealing with the question.

Railway Dispute.

On the more domestic subject of the protracted dispute between the National Union of Railwaymen and the Amalgamated Union of Engineers in relation to the representation of railway shopmen in wage negotiations, the heat of some of the discussion provided a good example of the amount of fighting which trade unionists are prepared to do within and without their own ranks in the interests of working class unity and world tranquility. The wrangle was remarkable rather for the vehemence of some of the speakers and the noise of their supporters and opponents than for any new light.

Contradictory resolutions by the rival unions were tabled, but Frank Hodges cut in with a motion for the "previous question," which was carried by over a million votes, to the wrath of many of the combatants. "Another triumph of working-class solidarity," a delegate in the gallery shouted sarcastically.

Disarmament.

The disarmament resolution was in the following terms:—This Congress begins with satisfaction that the President of the United States is calling an international conference to discuss the question of the disarmament of nations, with which policy it is fully in accord.

In the opinion of this Congress, however, such a conference will not be satisfactory unless Labor is adequately represented thereon, and understanding that Great Britain will take part in such conference, this congress claims the right to appoint representatives of organized labor to attend the conference, seeing that the subject to be discussed is a matter vitally affecting the interests of the workers in all nations.

The Congress further protests against the recent decisions of the British Government to carry out an extensive program of armaments, which is contrary to the spirit of disarmament and peace as advocated repeatedly by members of the Government themselves.

Futility of Strikes.

A highly significant demonstration of the strength of that section of the trade union movement which has learnt the futility of strike action was made at the congress.

An important resolution placed on the agenda by the Iron and Steel Confederation, with the support of the General Workers' Union, called for the adequate provision of machinery to bring the full authority of the labor movement to bear on securing equitable settlements without recourse to stoppages of work, and, failing that, on co-ordinating the machinery and resources of the movement generally to ensure a successful issue.

A. Pugh, in moving the resolution, said that not one per cent of strikes were justified by results.

A. Hayday, M.P., pointed out that the General Workers' Union had spent £400,000 in unemployment pay as a result of the miners' dispute.

Far Reaching.

Robert Smilie described the resolution as far-reaching and reactionary. He said it proposed to draw the teeth of organized labor and take away its arms. There would have to be fighting in the future as there had been in the past. (Cheers.)

On a card vote the resolution was defeated by an overwhelming majority, the figures being: For the resolution, 987,000. Against $,628,000.

The significance of the discussion lay not in the decision but because the representatives of nearly a million workers cast their numbers against strike action except in extremities. Those who voted with the majority seemed to be mainly influenced by a disinclination to surrender trade union autonomy. Otherwise the minority might have been larger.

Gillespie—"I wonder what sort of a debt collector I would make?" Hardrum—"You might let me have a fiver for ten days and find out."
