Combine Utility
With the Artistic.

In a new community utility is everything and art is a negligible quantity. We build our houses for utility and not for art. Our business places are put up in the same way. We care little for the picturesque, because of the struggle of making a living and the joy we take in achievement. Then as the place increases in age, in stability, and the struggle for a living becomes a little easier, we notice the inartistic and we compare and eventually turn to improving the crude structure of a city which we have already erected. That is how we build cities on this continent. There possibly are exceptions to that general rule, but the exceptions are born of peculiar circumstances.

The people in the new community perhaps have just as keen a conception of the artistic as those of the older, for most of the people come from the older communities. It is lack of opportunity and lack of incentive and engrossment in other things that holds us back. We have so many natural beauties here that it seems foolish to hang pictures in our homes. For a splendid picture step out any fine evening and look westward across the harbor. There may be seen a hundred pictures in an hour such as no artist can paint.

Should Cultivate
Artistic Expression.

Artistic expression should not be neglected even here in Prince Rupert. The art of music is studied here a good deal, the length of the winter evenings giving ample opportunity for such studies. Such organizations as the musical society may do much to encourage this.

Little is done in the way of artistic expression in picture, and the artistic speech is much neglected. Yesterday the address of Prebendary Gough was in many respects a model of art. Such sentences as "England bears things until it is very late and then she rises in her unconquerableness of race and you catch the first gleams of the sunrise of victory" are so picturesque that you like to repeat them, especially if you happen to be English. It is just as easy to express a thing elegantly, or in other words artistically, as to do it crudely, once you have acquired the knack. We read Shakespeare today after hundreds of years just to catch his wonderful style and to enjoy his artistic method of expression.
He told old stories, but told them so well that they have endured and will endure and will reflect themselves through all the literature of all time.

Catch the Idea,
Then Express It.

Not very long since a young man wrote a series of articles for a newspaper and an older man ventured to criticize them, mentioning the lack of continuity and other faults which he noticed.
Later the young man was writing to the older and he expressed himself in this wise: "While I am fully aware that I am unable to maintain that continuity of thought which is so necessary to the perfect style, yet perhaps, in my own rough and disjointed way, I may be able to chronicle events with sufficient clarity to at least make it possible for you to keep in touch with affairs, if not to experience that keen delight that comes with a perusal of the best literature."

The young man had caught the idea and produced an artistic sentence which was a delight. It would not be suitable for all occasions because the long sentence is ponderous, while the short sentence makes for vivacity. Some of the fine sentences of the great writers are always remembered. They are like the shining diamonds in a tiara, the brightness of which will be remembered long after the tiara and its associations are forgotten.

To do things well is often to do things artistically. To write a letter well is to write it artistically. To set a table well is to do it artistically. To cook a dinner well is to do it so that it may entice the appetite, and such a method is the artistic method. We unconsciously study art in our daily life and we also unconsciously harbor ugly ideas and ideals that make life ugly and sad and gloomy and set the world on edge. Art is harmony with just enough discord to make the harmony apparent. Sourness puckers the mouth, but too much sweet is even more sickening than sourness. The sweet with just a touch of sour is art in taste.

pepsia, this Fruit Medicine Gave Relief

Mlle ANTOINETTE BOUCHER

917 Dorion St., Montreal.

"I am writing to tell you that I owe my life to 'Fruit-a-tives' for this remedy relieved me when I had abandoned all hope of ever recovering my health.

I suffered terribly with Dyspepsia. I had it for years and all the medicines I took did not do me any good.

I read something about 'Fruita-tives' being good for all Stomach Troubles and Disorders of Digestion so I tried them. After finishing a few boxes, I was entirely relieved of the Dyspepsia and my general health was restored.

I thank the great fruit medicine, relief."

CHAUTAUQUA IS
THE UNIVERSITY
OF ALL PEOPLE

Chautauqua has been called "The People's University." for while it caters to the child and the youth, it is projected in large measure for those who have passed the educational age and have graduated into the school of life. It is intended to inspire all classes with a "desire for higher thinking, more vigorous living and a complete individual and community success."

Below are given some of the comments of the Canadian press:
"Never before has a community project appealed to all sorts and conditions as Chautauqua."
"Nothing in recent years has been so conducive to the public good as the week of unalloyed pleasure and entertainment which has just closed."

"It is apparent that our people have come to appreciate what Chautauqua means, and the possibilities it offers for the enjoyment of music, the inspiration that may be gained through the lectures, and the uplift that comes through these and the other forms of entertainment."

"The interest caused and the profound impression that the lectures have made have done more than anything else in the history of the town."

Message of Cheer.

"The music, the lectures, and even the fun presented from the Chautauqua program, bore the Chautauqua message of cheer and a higher and broader life."

"The bringing together of the people of the town in the common cause of the Chautauqua idea has perhaps been one of the most valuable features connected with it. It has fostered the "get together" spirit as nothing else has done."

"It has brought about an intermingling of town and country people that is good for the whole community. It has provided for a 'whole week'."
