MISSING MAN WAS FOUND DEAD NEAR CITY PRINCE GEORGE

PRINCE GEORGE, June 20.—While engaged in the pulp cruise on May 25, members of the forest department's staff found the remains of the body of an old prospector named McKittrick, who was missed early in the spring. They came upon the remains about ten miles up the McGregor river. McKittrick was 65 years of age. He had been visiting a trapper up the river, and from his attitude, it is believed that he had seated himself on a snowshoe under a tree to rest, and had quietly fallen asleep and died in the bitter cold prevailing at that time. Animals had destroyed the body to a great extent, but the party buried his remains, marking the grave by a snowshoe at the head and foot and blazing a tree. His identity was established by a gun license.
