Two Men in a Car

A short account of a Trip to California in a Ford Flivver
By H. F. Pullen

THE HOTTEST YET.

MODESTO, May 12.—Those who like a hot climate should try the San Joaquin (pronounced San Waken) and the other interior valleys of California which connect with it. Today has been intensely hot, a great contrast to the cold weather of a day or two ago when near the coast.

Yesterday we crossed the Teahachapi mountains and drove along the tops over a wonderful road for about half a day. It is called the Ridge Road and while you look down hundreds and even thousands of feet, the grades of the road are so easy that our little Ford negotiated them on high all the way. The scenery cannot be described. There were no trees but the hills were mottled like a leopard. Descending into the plain we have had level country ever since, so level that it is tiring to drive on account of the sameness. Today we covered two hundred miles most of the way through irrigated lands including wonderful grape country around Fresno.

There are a number of fine little cities and thriving towns about every few miles along the route. Sometimes we pass through an oil country and then again it is purely agricultural.

At Modesto.

Tonight we had supper in Modesto and are now camping on the banks of the river. There have been no incidents that could interest northern people. There are a few mosquitoes flying around and occasionally one bites, but not so many as to make it disagreeable. There are about a dozen other parties camped in the park here.

I was much impressed with the influence of environment on people. In places where there was plenty of water and the land was suitable, the people were prosperous, clean, and active. In places where there was not a sufficiency of water or where the land seemed unsuitable for bearing good crops there was every evidence of slothfulness, dirt, neglect, and a generally unkept condition.

To any young man who would succeed I would say: Go to a community that is prosperous, that has natural wealth and that offers inducements for others to go there. Nothing is so discouraging as to have to fight nature.

Close to Accidents.

We left Los Angeles for home yesterday morning and hope to continue northward. We have had no accidents so far but have been very close to them. Yesterday morning as I was making my way out of the congested part of Los Angeles, I saw a girl knocked down. I could not be sure whether it was done by the street car or a passing auto as I was intently minding my own business just then, but I saw her fall and saw the others pick her up. She did not seem badly hurt.

Yesterday we passed a big Cadillac car on its side and were told by people standing near that two young men had stolen the car and upset it there a few minutes before we arrived. One was killed and the other was not expected to recover.

I think I told before of seeing a Ford smashed at Palo Alto when two men were fatally injured. It struck a tree on the roadside and telescoped, one man being thrown out and the other remained tangled in the wreck.

Job's Comforter.

Many of the garages advertise tow-cars and the religious fanatics now and then write sentences on the fences such as: "Where are you going when you die?" There are inspiring. I have forgotten how many fatal motor accidents there were in Los Angeles in the past month but it was a large number. The wonder is that there are not more.

We have driven in Seattle, Tacoma, Portland, San Francisco and other places, but Los Angeles is by far the most difficult owing to the large number of cars there. Every street for miles is lined with parked autos. At some corners turning to the left is forbidden. The way the practiced drivers dodge in and out is a wonder. It makes me nervous to pass through the city with the Lizzie.

Hollywood, which we visited several times, appeared to us as the best bit of Los Angeles, but there may have been other suburbs we did not visit. We saw Venice, an intensely beautiful place, but rather degraded by cheap amusements.

Secret of Prosperity

Yesterday I met a business man and asking him about conditions in the big tourist centre. He told me the place was prosperous partly because of the immense tourist trade and partly because it was a non-union city. Many factories were establishing there rather than at San Francisco, because labor conditions were more favorable.

It seems that unskilled labor is cheap because so many people with small capital go there to live and then find the time hang heavy on their hands and decide to look for temporary jobs. They are willing to work for low wages because they do not wholly depend on the wages for a living.

Tomorrow we hope to be in Sacramento and will keep moving northward as time is limited. This hurried trip does not give much opportunity to see things.

MESSAGE FLOATED FROM MID-OCEAN TO GRAHAM ISLAND

An interesting piece of paper enclosed in a bottle which has floated over 1000 miles from the middle of the Pacific Ocean to the west coast of Graham Island, and since September 29, 1921, was picked up by P. A. Meuse, fisherman of the schooner Mureineag, Captain M. Solows, which was in port over the week-end. The bottle was found on the beach of Graham Island last Monday.

The message, which is written on a sheet of note paper of the Admiral Line steamer Keystone State and is almost washed out by apparent contact with water, is as follows:

"En route to Victoria from

NEW BUILDING IS FINE ONE

Middy Fortier Has Handsome Four-storey Permanent Block on Eighth Ave.

One of the finest permanent cement, tile and stucco four-storey buildings in the city is situated on the corner of Eighth Avenue and Fulton Street and will be completed early in June. This building is being erected at a cost of $7,000 by A. Fortier, an old timer of Prince Rupert, who recently returned to the city from Montreal after a five year absence. He is taking up his permanent residence here and thinks that of all the cities he has visited Prince Rupert is the best. Mr. Fortier says that for first class workmanship in the building line the workmen of the city have no equal. The building has a 30 foot frontage by 10 foot depth and a full 8 foot cement basement. The entire cement work and outside stucco was executed by R. Bryson and G. V. Van Tuyl and leaves nothing to be desired from a workmanship standpoint. The store floor has a 10 1/2 feet height from floor to ceiling, with a suite in the rear comprising bathroom, kitchen, living room and bedroom. The store will in all probability be opened by Mr. Fortier in the near future. The upstairs living quarters are roomy and airy, with large windows admitting much daylight and consisting of dining room, two bedrooms, bathroom, kitchen, and a large living room. The ceilings are 9-ft. 3-in. high. The plumbing has been admirably done by H. Letourneau and easily passed the city test. The whole interior is lathed and plastered with hardwall plaster finish giving the maximum of inside comfort, the work being done by G. Blythe. The building is fitted throughout with the double wiring system installed by Don Brown, permitting of light and power for cooking and heating being carried over separate wires. Provision has been made for electric heating in every room. The flooring will be of double dressed fir, the interior carpentry being carried out by A. Leveque.

Mr. Fortier says that for the northern climate this class of building is by far the best and cheapest in the long run, and that, in insurance rating alone, the premium is less than half on that of a lumber building. It is his opinion that in six years he will have saved the extra cost of the permanent structure in painting and insurance. He is particularly pleased with the manner in which the entire work has been carried out and is high in his praise of the way the contractors have handled the job.

GUESSING CONTESTS DEMORALIZE YOUTH

Calgary Council Urge Minister to Make Practice Illegal.

CALGARY, Alta., May 22.—A most definite stand in regard to guessing contests on football and baseball games which is at present being conducted by several newspapers and publications in Western Canada has been taken up by the Council of the Calgary Board of Trade and a resolution urging upon the Minister of Justice to amend the Criminal Code of Canada in order to make such a practice illegal has been adopted.

Members of the Council are unanimous in their opinion that the amount of the money and time now being consumed on these guessing contests interferes with legitimate business and were helping to form, particularly in the minds of the young people, the idea of getting something for nothing which was not in the public interest.
