Bathing Beaches at "Cradle of Civilization"

A scene on the intensely modern Stanley Bay Beach, Alexandria, Egypt, named in honor of the famous explorer, showing the extremely modern trend to which this city has turned, as regards its beaches. Gay pyjamas and brightly colored beach parasols resemble fashionable watering places as do the ever-present canoes and surf-boards and chic ba hing suits. Note the unique three-tiered crescent of bath houses in step-back architecture, which line the back of the beach.
