North and South Ireland Join to Try to Prevent Commencement of Strike

BELFAST, Feb. 3.—While the boundary negotiations between the North and South of Ireland have so far failed, the respective ministers of labor of the North and South governments are at present in London trying to prevent a big railway strike in the country.

The Irish railway management and employees have failed to reach an agreement and the Ulster minister of labor has been urgently summoned to Dublin to renew settlement efforts with the Free State minister of labor. If negotiations definitely collapse, a general strike throughout Ireland will go into effect on February 15.

Yesterday sixty-one passengers of the steamer Cedric who landed at Queenstown were unable to depart as no trains were running out of the town of Cork.

HIGH TARIFF FOREIGN EGGS

Will Probably Be Asked For by Poultrymen in Convention at Vancouver.

Vancouver, Feb. 3.—The Poultrymen's Co-operative Exchange, which is holding its annual meeting here, will likely ask the Dominion Government to increase the tariff on eggs imported from the United States to Canada. It is claimed that large importations of eggs from the United States are responsible for the break in price which is a menace to the poultry industry of British Columbia in that it cuts off the B. C. market in the East for eggs.

PRINCESS MARY IS BARED FROM THRONE BECAUSE OF MARRIAGE

TORONTO, Feb. 3.—A cable message to the Mail and Empire from London says that Princess Mary by her marriage to Viscount Lascelles renounces the royal rank and all claim for ever to her right of succession to the British throne. This will be embodied in the marriage contract.

While the possibility of Princess Mary ever succeeding to the throne is remote, her children might do so but the clause now makes such an event impossible.

OTTAWA, Feb. 3.—The House of Commons has been summoned to open its session on March 8. Attorney General Reviews Political Situation Today

Full of optimism, of faith in the Liberal party and its future both in the Dominion and the province, the new attorney-general, A. M. Manson, gave a magnetic address to the Prince Rupert Liberal Association at its annual meeting last night. He spoke of his faith in the members of the present Legislature at Victoria, and outstanding was his mention of the honesty of purpose of the members of the opposition as well as those on the government side. There were no knocks for anyone, nothing but earnestness of purpose, keenness to serve and a desire to forward the interests of the north country with frequent reference to the constituency of Omineca which he represents so well.

Mr. Manson spoke of the different position in which he was placed on that occasion compared with former meetings. At the other gatherings he had been able to express himself freely on any and every topic, but now he was somewhat tied owing to the position he held. It was, however, a real pleasure to see the men there on business bent. The day of party hatred was past. Today they were asking for and seeking clean records in public life. They believed with him that the north had the greatest opportunity yet before them. They had met to support the two Governments at Ottawa and Victoria.

Difficulties.

Mr. Manson then outlined very briefly some of the difficulties which had met the Oliver Government, largely as a result of the war. There was the partly finished railroad, the returning soldiers and the financial stress. The whole condition was topsy-turvy and all the difficulties were not yet solved. There was the P.G.E., which had been launched largely by Vancouver real estate men. It would have been better if the railway had been built from the G.T.P. into the Peace River, for the Peace River country was extremely wealthy. As a government and a people the province had blundered and they now had to make the best they could of it.

Telling of the efforts that had been made, the minister said that after five years in the Legislature he could say it would be impossible to get another set of men such as those who had been elected in 1916. With one or two possible exceptions none could be contaminated by the evil influence brought against them. Another body of men had been elected since that, men that he was proud to sit with. They were practically all clean and upright men as they could ask to have, on both sides. The thirteen Conservatives were imbued with integrity of purpose.

The Liberal Caucus.

Speaking of the Liberal caucus, Mr. Manson said the calling of the men together was one of the wisest steps ever taken. They had endeavored to have such a gathering during the session of the Legislature but, owing to the press of other business, this had been found impossible. It was then arranged that they should meet later. "I do not know of any body of men who ever met with such earnestness and sincerity of purpose as did the Liberal members during those four days they were together at Victoria," said the speaker. "Every one was determined to do his best in the interests of the province. The only one not present was not able to be there. Messrs. Perry and Whiteside were both there." While he was not at liberty to tell everything that occurred, he could mention that each minister had a good going over in regard to the conduct of his department and the difficulties were threshed out by men determined to improve the conditions.
