TRANSPORTATION CHARLOTTE IDS.

J. L. Barge Writes Letter on Conditions to Local Business House.

The following letter dealing with transportation conditions on the Queen Charlotte Islands was received this week by a local business house from J. L. Barge, of Queen Charlotte City, with the request that it be published in the Daily News:

"In reference to my last shipment of fowls, I would like to say these birds were prepared and crated early on the morning of June 6 and the boat is liable to be in at 4 or 5 a.m. From my residence there is no wagon road and we use a very rocky beach—so that I either have to use a boat or wheel the crates on a barrow more than a mile. The birds were taken down about 10 a.m. and at 6 p.m. the boat arrives. After discharging freight I am told it is staying in the inlet until Thursday noon so I must take the fowls home again—that it was impossible to do that night so I removed them early next morning and I am watering and feeding them in the meantime. Then instead of noon on Thursday the steamer insisted on whistles for my fowls at 5 a.m. and then I have to hustle to recreate from the fatiguing coops (no chance being given to feed and water that morning) and stagger over an eighth of a mile of mud flat with them. I am informed the boat makes several extra calls before going to Prince Rupert—Wales canyons on the Skeena, etc., further delaying delivery of the live stock. It is scarcely surprising that there should be so extraordinary a shrinkage as 20 per cent (not much of course only just the difference between profit and loss), as you informed me by wire. Mail was received too late to fill order for feed by return trip. This also might be a very serious matter with my large stock for we cannot always keep two weeks stock of feed on hand.

Reason to Complain.
"We have very just and reasonable cause to complain of the boat and mail service for we should at least be able to obtain some advance information. The boat is supposed to be in early this morning and I have a number of fowls (16) that I have been crating for two weeks. I wish to ship you, but I am now told the boat has a heavy freight for Ocean Falls and may be in tonight (MAY BE). Must I take a chance of crating up these well and crated fed birds and removing to the wharf to await 24 hours or a chance of missing the shipment altogether? Of course I should not complain, the S.S. Co. have a clause somewhere on their freight bill to throw the blame on one higher up. By "Act of God" it reads—so why complain—BUT?"

BATTLE WITH BEAR NEAR GEORGIA RIVER
Stampede John Ruined Bruin's Hide But Came Out Victorious.
With one side of him resembling a hamburger steak and his nose looking like anything except a nose, but still undaunted in his determination to continue pursuing the elusive grass-root prospect, J. O. Stenbraten, known in every mining camp on the North American continent as "Stampede John," returned Saturday morning from a prospecting trip to the headwaters of Georgia river, says the Hyder Miner of recent date.

Which is a preliminary to the statement that John has emerged victorious from his first and only battle with a bear, winning from Madame Bruin by deft strokes of his prospecting axe and outfeinting the lightning swipes of her formidable front feet.

John was working around the brim of a deep box canyon, with a 50-pound pack on his back and an axe in his hand. As he clambered out of a small gully, an immense black bear struck down at him from her ambush behind a clump of brush. The blow glanced down the right side of his face, closing the eye, tearing his nose open and lacerating his face from eyebrow to chin. Simultaneously with her attack John struck blindly with his axe and cut a deep gash in the upper part of her neck severing some tendons. When he was able of conscious thought, John was all riled up. So he waded into that bear with his axe and ruined a perfectly prime hide.
