

WEDDING SURPRISE TOOK PLACE LAST NIGHT AT A PARTY

Mrs. Wick of the Richmond Rooms Becomes Bride of Anskar Wick.

Surprise parties are common but surprise weddings are unusual. Last night a surprise wedding took place at the home of Mrs. Jacobsen, Ninth Street.

The pretty ceremony then took place, Mrs. Anna Wick, the popular proprietress of the Richmond Rooms, being joined in matrimony to Anskar Wick of this city.

After the ceremony there was a bountiful supper at which Dr. Grant proposed the toast of the bride.

The party accompanied the couple to the boat where they were given a great sendoff as they left for Seattle and other southern cities on their honeymoon.

NEWSPAPERMAN SAYS CONDITIONS ARE BAD IN ALASKA FISHERIES

SEATTLE, Aug. 14.—Condition bordering on penury were found in the so-called "China gangs" of the Alaska salmon canneries.

Max Stern, newspaper man, sent to Bristol Bay to investigate things at first hand.

For over a month he lived in the hold of one of these vessels recently described by a San Francisco paper as a "Hell Ship."

"The conditions of these thousands of unskilled workers sent each year from coast cities is about as bad as anything I know of," said Stern on his return to Seattle.

"They do not work for the cannery manager, but for an Oriental contractor. His only interest in them is to exploit them to the limit.

"The labor camps of the 'China gangs' of the Alaska canneries are among the most efficient Bolshevik factories in America.

"The whole Chinese contract system should be abolished by law, and the canneries should hire and feed their men themselves, as they do the fishermen and mechanics."

Stern found the cod fisheries of Nuga and Pirate Cove a nest of discontented men, deserting at every opportunity.

"The men cannot make a decent daily wage at one quarter of a cent a pound paid by the San Francisco 'cod trust.'"

JAPANESE GENERAL HITS TEN BULLS

Shows Americans at Peekskill How Nipponese Shoot.

PEEKSKILL, N. Y., Aug. 14.—An American army officer on the national guard rifle range today asked Maj. Gen. H. Haraguchi of the Japanese army if the commissioned personnel of the Nipponese forces was well trained "from the ground up."

The major general answered an hour later, when he accompanied Adj. Gen. Leslie Kincaid, New York national guard, down a line of 7th regiment men at practice on the 500-yard range.

The detachment of national guardsmen were prone; it was raining; the firing line was a quagmire.

In the centre of the line lay a private, mud smeared, and every time he fired a flag waved over the target, informing him his shot had missed the mark.

again, and the Japanese general smiled.

"May I take the soldier's rifle?" he asked the adjutant general.

General Kincaid nodded. The private saluted, handed his rifle to the major general and moved to the rear.

From the pit under the target a soldier telephoned: "Ten straight bull's eyes. Some shooting, buddy."

Haraguchi covered with mud, smiled.

"From the ground up, yes."
