Possible War
Situation Difficult.

It is difficult to comment on the war situation, especially as the later news often changes the complexion of affairs. At the time of writing, however, it seems as if it would be impossible to avoid a conflict.

Should there be war, of course Canada will bear her part. The Terrible Turk would be unbearable if he should be victorious on this occasion. In the present instance, however, it is hardly to be supposed that Canada will look on this as a war where she is fighting for her existence and where it will be necessary to conscript men. Such action should never be taken except in defense of the country against invaders or possible invaders. At such a time every man should be compelled to help defend the country in which he lives. It is his duty and privilege. Citizenship in a British country carries with it many privileges and the duty of defending the country goes with it.

Position Of Canada
Is Much Discussed.

The position of Canada today is being much discussed. Of course there are many who condemn the Government for not at once announcing that we are ready to fight. On the other hand there are just as many, if not more, who look more calmly at the situation and agree with the action taken by the Dominions jointly as announced yesterday when they practically demand submission of the whole case to the League of Nations. The difficulty with such delay is that in the meantime the enemy is entrenching himself. The present positions must be maintained at any cost, it would seem, and Britain is being left to do it alone without even the help of her former allies, and without a single man from the Dominions.

Right To Search
On The High Seas.

The United States is claiming the right to search British or other vessels nearing her coast to find out if they are rum runners that intend to land their cargoes illegally on the United States coast.

In 1812 the United States declared war against Britain because Britain claimed the right to search American vessels in time of war to discover if there were deserted British seamen aboard.

There is no suggestion that the present American claim will lead to international complications for any dispute of that kind can be settled by an international tribunal. It is, however, an interesting situation and one that may lead to ill feeling if not carefully handled.

While we strongly sympathize with the United States in her efforts to prevent illegal importation of liquor there are general principles which are much more important than that of prohibition and one of those is the right of nations to the high seas. Nothing is likelier to lead to future wars than a loose interpretation of international law.

Stop Upholding
Law Breakers.

The United States is breaking an international law in order to enforce a national law. In this country we are inclined to wink at the breaking of the law just because some of us are thirsty. It was only a few months ago, comparatively, when a large section of the people of British Columbia was calling loudly for a moderation law and declaring that it would put the bootleggers out of business and would mean the settlement of the liquor problem. They secured that and now they wish to go further and they wink at the law-breaking which is going on. The Attorney-General calls on the people to stop upholding the law breakers and to play the game. He will get a ready response from most people who wish to see the affairs of the country conducted decently and in order.

TRADE ASSOCIATIONS

George Hougham Addressed Rotary Club Yesterday on Interesting Subject.

The Rise and Development of Trade Associations was the subject of an address given yesterday at the Rotary Club luncheon by George Hougham, organizer for the Retail Merchants' Association of Canada. He told of the formation of the big London Companies and of their aims and objects and charities and suggested that business and professional men had obligations to society which had been rapidly recognized.

Mr. Hougham suggested that if any business called for attention it was the distributing business. It was necessary to study the adaptation of supply to the needs of the people. If there was anything out of step with modern demands today it was the present method of distribution. For a long time it had been without standards either professional or ethical.

Mr. Hougham also told of the Retail Merchants' Association of Canada which was organized for the purpose of reviving the standards of the distributing business.

COLEMAN COX
COLLECTION

Valuable Thoughts and Sayings Gathered at Odd Times

Coleman Cox had a hobby all his own. He was a collector but instead of collecting things like postage stamps, curios, diamonds or other useless trinkets he made a point of jotting down all the odd or pungent sayings he heard and these he tabulated and indexed. One day he was called on for an address and he selected a few of the brightest things in his collection and gave them to the audience. Such an enthusiastic reception did he get that he later rewrote a large number of them and published them in booklet form and the sale of this booklet has run into hundreds of thousands. Here are a few of the bright thoughts as given at the Rotary Club yesterday by American Consul Wakefield:

You can't buy Confidence and Respect with Profanity and Vulgarity.

Of course your boss doesn't run his business right. Probably he would fire you if he did.

When the boss asks you what you think about a matter, tell him what you think, and not what you think he thinks.

Another good thing about telling the truth is, you don't have to remember what you say.

Many manufacturing concerns greatest profits come from by-products. Employee, your by-product is your idle time. What profit are you getting out of it?

If you have anything to say, say it, and with as few words as possible. That is what Abraham Lincoln did, and the world still remembers and repeats what he said.

The young fellow who has a coffee and doughnut breakfast downtown, an armchair lunch, and eats a delicate dinner out of paper bags when he gets home in the evening, nine times out of ten has married some fool girl because she was a good dancer. You are not dressed for work until you put on a smile.

Never hear of a fellow working in a small salary crushing a woman's heart and being sued for breach of promise?

When a man is chasing the almighty dollar he forgets there is a God, and when he is chasing women he forgets there is a devil

The Man in the Moon
SAYS:-

If you wish to get a reputation for a true prophet tell the people there is likely to be considerable rain in Prince Rupert this winter.

THERE is no need of a broadcasting station in Prince Rupert, says Jinks. All you have to do is to whisper something confidentially and if goes around the town quicker than a fire through a ten acre dry slashing.

AS a hint to local society people who may be intending to go south to live it may be mentioned that when they reach "the outside" they will give up riding in a car and thenceforth take a "caw."

SCOTTISH people used to be taught at the family altar and the kirk and took the shorter catechism along with their porridge but today they—yes what do they do?

REMARKABLE CASE OF SLEEP WALKING

LONDON, Sept. 22.—An extraordinary case of sleep-walking is reported from Fleet, Lincolnshire. A Norfolk man was cycling through the country, and arriving at Holbeach close upon midnight, was unable to find lodgings. Placing his bicycle against a gate, he lay down exhausted by the roadside and went to sleep.

On awakening he could not find his machine. He aroused the village constable and learned that he had walked to Fleet, two miles away, in his sleep. The bicycle was later found where he had left it at Holbeach.
