Longer Stop Here For C.P.R. Vessels.
 As a result of complaints made by passengers on the C.P.R. steamers, the Council of the Board of Trade yesterday decided to write the officials of the company asking that the Alaskan vessels of their line be allowed to make a longer stay in this port. Passengers wish to spend some little time here in order to see the city and its industries and to make small purchases in the city. This they are sometimes unable to do, owing to the short time the vessels remain here.
 Probably the C.P.R. officials have never realized that the passengers on their vessels were interested in Prince Rupert or they would have made the change long ago.

Uselessness Of Senate.
 The closing of Parliament draws attention once more to the uselessness of that appendage of Parliament known as the Senate. The old men who sit there deal with a number of divorce cases and pass on bills which have been considered at length in the other House. It is the old men's home for politicians, the place where the "has-beens" are sent, where they may putter away their remaining days in playing at lawmaking.
 Canada cannot afford to keep up such an interesting relic just now, but the difficulty is in ridding ourselves of the incubus. It would be necessary to get the old men to vote themselves out of business in order to secure a change in the British North America Act which would make the thing legal. It would be an admission on the part of the old men that they are a useless body and that they are accepting the people's money under false pretences.

The Liberal party had a plank in its platform years ago advocating the abolition or reform of the Senate. So far, however, nothing has been done, owing to the difficulty in getting the Senators to see why they should be reformed. As long as they do not put obstructions in the path of legislation they are allowed to remain. It will take some big contest between the two Houses to draw public attention to the uselessness of carrying a payroll of that kind without getting return for the money expended.

City Utilities Under Discussion.
 The city utilities have been under discussion a good deal of late and that largely through the lack of information available. The Daily News has published several articles dealing with the matter, one of which was taken from the annual statement of the city auditor and the other the result of a recent meeting at which all the officials of the department were present as well as the deputy minister of finance of the province.
 In view of the divergent views expressed and of the desire of the public for information, it seems as if an authoritative statement should be given out over the signature of the mayor and the chairman of the utilities committee, which would explain the whole situation and let the people see how their utilities are paying. There is too wide a spread between the figures given out by Alderman Montgomery that the utilities have made a profit of $100,000 and the other that they have lost $3,000. The probability is that neither are correct.

Must Allow For Depreciation.
 Any business such as that conducted by the city must allow a large percentage for depreciation. There will have to be a new power plant soon, which means that the old one is virtually scrapped. There will have to be a new telephone system installed, which means that the old one will be of little value. When the old plants are set aside they must have been paid for if the books of the city have been properly kept. The depreciation on plants such as those used by the city is very nearly ten per cent. That is what a business firm would write off each year. If this has been done and there is still a good margin of profit, the people should know it and they should know it officially. If, on the other hand, it is shown that there is not a good margin of profit after setting aside a proper sum for overhead and depreciation, then the people who own the plants should be so informed. It is easy to juggle with figures so that the ordinary person does not understand them. What is needed now is a plain statement of fact without any camouflage.
