VERY HONEST

Mark Twain was called upon to speak at a club dinner and took for his theme, "Honesty." He said when he was a boy at home he one day saw a cart full of melons. He was a boy—and he was tempted; besides he liked melons.

"I sneaked up to that cart," said Mark, "and I stole a melon. I went into an alley to devour it. But—I had no sooner set my teeth into it than I caused a strange feeling came over me. I came to a quick resolution. Firmly, I walked up to that cart, placed the stolen melon where I got it from, and took a ripe one."

PRINCE OF WALES IS MADE MASTER WARDEN OF BRITISH MASONS

Elaborate Setting to Recent Proceedings in Albert Hall, London

LONDON, Dec. 8.—By Canadian Press.—In a setting of great splendor and in the midst of what is believed to have been the largest Masonic assembly ever gathered under one roof, His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales was recently invested in Albert Hall here, as Senior Grand Warden of the United Grand Lodge of England. Nine thousand Freemasons, drawn from all parts of the English jurisdiction, embracing lodges all over the world, as well as of representative deputations from the sister Grand lodges of England and Scotland and some of the Dominions beyond the seas, were present at the investiture. Over 13,000 applicants for tickets of admission had to be disappointed, and more than 1,000 of those favored had to stand throughout the ceremony, which was conducted by the Duke of Connaught as Grand Master.

There was a stately procession of High Officers, whose approach was heralded by a silvery fanfare of trumpets from unseen musicians of the Grenadier Guards' Band, followed by a distant roll of drums. The High Officers escorted the Deputy Grand Master, Right Hon. Sir Thomas Halsey, towards the Great Throne. It was a scene of splendor. Purple and gold predominated on the dais and in the front belt of seats in the arena. Behind was a further belt in which crimson was the prevailing tone, and in the vast background were the pale blue and white regalia of the rank and file of the Masonic craft.

Greeting the Duke
 When the Grand Lodge had been opened the trumpets sounded again, and a second procession was formed, this time conducting the Grand Master, Sir Lord Amphil, pro-Grand Master and Viscount Birkenhead, Junior Grand Warden, to the dais. The Duke of Connaught was greeted with cheer after cheer.

While the enthusiasm was at its height a slim young man in morning dress, with a simple blue collar of the Masonic order, slipped unobtrusively in, and sat in the front row of the body of the hall—the Prince of Wales, looking unusually grave, but in nowise nervous. He was accompanied by the Duke of York.

After reading a message sent to the King expressing the assembly's loyal devotion to the Throne, and his Majesty's acknowledgement of "another proof of the close association between Freemasonry and my House," the Grand Master began the investiture of the Prince. The Duke recalled that this was the second time in the course of about fifty years that the Heir to the Throne had taken upon himself high office in the Grand Lodge of England. The Grand Master placed around the Prince's neck a collar of royal blue with an edging of gold—the badge of his office as Senior Grand Warden.

The Prince's Reply
 There was tremendous cheering, and then followed the Prince's reply, which was a brief expression of his gratitude for the honor conferred upon him and for the warm welcome he had received. When the new Senior Grand Warden was conducted to his appointed place the assembly sprang to its feet and cheered and cheered again. This was followed by the unveiling, by Lord Amphil, of a portrait of the Grand Master, painted by Sir Arthur Cope.

The Prince of Wales entered the Masonic order through the Household Brigade Lodge, No. 2611, which he joined in May, 1919. He was then an officer in the Brigade of Guards. Shortly afterwards his brother the Duke of York also became a Mason, he was then initiated in the Navy Lodge, No. 2612. Both brothers became in turn Warden and Master of their respective mother lodges.

Zeal for Masonry
 The investiture of the Prince of Wales as Senior Grand Warden was the first occasion on which an Heir Apparent accepted a position in the Grand Lodge other than that of Grand Master. The Prince, in being a keen Mason, is following the example of his grandfather Edward VII., who, during his Masonic reign
