FINGER PRINTS ARE ACCEPTED EVIDENCE IN EDMONTON TRIAL

EDMONTON, June 2. — Finger print evidence in the supreme criminal court submitted in the case of Chester Coleman and Clarence Moreland, secured their conviction on the charges of breaking and entry and theft when all other evidence failed.

In the crown's case there was no evidence to show that the men had been seen near the premises broken into and there was no evidence to show that they were found in possession of the goods alleged to have been stolen, but when Detective Reynolds, of the city police, took prints of the men's fingers and compared them with the photo of the finger marks found on the stolen goods, they were the same. Mr. Justice Tweedie convicted the men on the charge and sentenced each to serve 18 months in jail.

The finger prints being wanting to a former case against Coleman the same day the jury found him not guilty on the charge of the theft of silk from the London Silk Company.
