SPEAKS IN BROOKLYN

"Leadership Looking to Action" Declared by Democratic Candidate to Be Issue of Campaign

Charges Evasion

Critical of Hoover Administration—Party Headed For Great Victory, Roosevelt Asserts

BROOKLYN, Nov. 8.—"Leadership looking to action is the principal issue of this campaign as I see it," declared Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt, Democratic candidate for President of the United States, in addressing a Democratic rally at the Academy of Music here at the week-end. Three thousand persons filled the capacity of the assembly place but special loud-speakers were arranged outside so that Governor Roosevelt's address might be transmitted to 25,000 people who were denied admittance.

"I have made no idle promises and have raised no false hopes in this campaign," continued Governor Roosevelt. "I have made no baseless charges against the president of the United States. I have endeavored to introduce no personalities and have preached no gospel of fear or panic."

Charging the Republican party with evasion and deception in the campaign, Governor Roosevelt declared that the present administration had been one of destruction, delay, deceit and despair. Unscrupulous appeals had been made for votes. The president, in his panic-stricken recitals, had misrepresented the platform of the Democratic party and the assertions of himself (Roosevelt). The administration had misrepresented the facts in regard to the country's affairs in order to maintain power.

The Democratic party's platform, to which the New York Governor declared that he had fully subscribed, believed in "a sound currency being maintained at all regards."

Reciprocal tariffs, which President Hoover now said were impracticable, had been advocated by such great Republican presidents in the past as McKinley and Taft.

Governor Roosevelt reiterated a previous statement that substantial reductions in expenditure, and eventually taxes, could be brought about by greater efficiency and economy in departmental routine at Washington. In spite of what President Hoover might have said, the president did have powers along these lines.

Scoffs at Tariff Commission

The Democratic candidate asserted that he favored an effective tariff commission. At the present rate of progress, the existing tariff commission would complete examining the tariff schedules by mid-summer of 2005 (laughter).

Great opportunities for constructive action and co-operation had been overlooked at Washington. "What is needed down there is an administration with the will and ability to get things done," declared the New York Governor.

In the course of his address, Governor Roosevelt reiterated his favor for immediate modification of the Volstead Act to permit the sale of beer and light wines in licensed premises and the sale of liquor under government supervision—without returning to the old time saloon, which he would never favor.

He was in favor of the development of St. Lawrence River power for the benefit of the American people, Governor Roosevelt declared.

"The result of your vote on Tuesday will resound around the world," declared Governor Roosevelt. "Beyond peradventure, we are headed for a great victory."

HOOVER AT ST. LOUIS

Attributes Depression to War and Its Aftermath—Democratic Misrepresentation

Averted Disaster

Country Now on Road to Recovery, Why Disturb Its Progress? Asks President

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 8.—Charging the Democratic candidate for president of the United States with disseminating conflicting and confusing statements on economic questions and appealing to the discontent and ignorance of the people, President Herbert Hoover, in a late campaign address here, attributed the depression from which the country has been suffering to the Great War and its aftermath. The Democratic candidate, the president declared, chose to ignore that depression and panic had overtaken many other nations of the world before it had come to the United States which, indeed, "had been the last fortress of economic stability in the world and at one moment had held that position only by the narrowest margin."

The crisis had been one of such seriousness that only, by the strong and decisive measures of the administration, had the United States been held to the gold standard and economic collapse, which might have meant almost total unemployment, been averted.

"The administration now has in hand measures which will bring about the return of complete stability and prosperity to the United States," asserted President Hoover. "Over one million men in this country have gone back to their normal jobs since the adjournment of the Democratic-controlled House of Representatives last June. Men are going back and will continue to go back to their jobs at the rate of 500,000 per month unless they are interrupted by a change in national policies."

Falsity and Confusion

The campaign of the Democratic party, the President declared, was based on falsity and confusion of the mind. Either the party lacked sincerity or was totally in ignorance of the issues of the day. The Governor of New York, by his continuous broadcasting of misleading and conflicting information regarding the depression and its causes, displayed an irresponsibility that did not promise well for one who could assume to govern a nation of 120,000,000 people.

Despite his "six-point program," what Governor Roosevelt would do for the relief of the farmers was still a mystery, declared the President. The people had yet to hear definitely what his policy was in regard to the soldiers' bonus. All he had to say was that he would pay the bonus when there should be a sufficient surplus. "But as long as there is a Democratic government, there will never be a surplus," declared the president. Nor had Governor Roosevelt expressed his views regarding Speaker Garner's policy of "green back" currency. Although he had talked much about the tariff, he had never informed the people which schedules he considered too high and which too low. All he promised was that he would do away with the tariff commission. He had not stated whether he would support the plan of William Randolph Hearst and others to put the government in big business undertakings or if he supported Mr. Hearst's opposition to the disarmament conference and to the Kellogg-Briand pact.

The President charged Governor Roosevelt with trying to mislead the people with confusing statements and avoiding the real issues of a serious campaign.

Borrowed Licence Plates Cause Two Men to Be Fined

Tyson Radley of Colleymount has been fined $10 and costs, with option of seven days' imprisonment, by Stipendiary Magistrate R. W. MacGowan at Burns Lake for operating a motorvehicle with borrowed licence plates. Charles Hunter, also of Colleymount, was fined $15 and costs, with option of ten days' imprisonment, for lending the licence plates to Radley. The fines were paid in each case.

On Road to Recovery

"This country is now well on the road to recovery," declared Mr. Hoover. "Why disturb its progress?" As a result of the policies of the administration, the banks have been able to meet every demand during the emergency. Excitement and panic have subsided and confidence is being restored. Social calm has been maintained and, despite the Democratic campaign of misrepresentation, the fact is that a major disaster has been averted."

THE ANSWER
Canadians Must Give

The new Dominion of Canada bonds now being offered to the Canadian public constitute more than an investment opportunity. They represent also an opportunity to strengthen Canada's high credit.

The citizens of other countries have recently given similar offerings immediate response. Last Thursday, for example, the British public within a few hours subscribed to approximately $1,000,000,000 of new British bonds yielding the investor less than 3 1/2%.

The new Dominion of Canada bonds provide a long term yield of 4 1/2%. They are backed by the resources of the Dominion. No better investment for your savings can be found.

The world is watching and it is a matter of national importance that Canadian investors give a prompt and resolute response. Canadians can thus show again that they are fully able to meet their country's financial needs. They can thus demonstrate again their confidence and faith in Canada. They can thus strengthen the high credit Canada has gained throughout the world.
