Fight Is On

In Great Britain.

The political fight is on in Great Britain and people here, looking on as outsiders, are of divided opinion as the result. It is pointed out that Lloyd George is undoubtedly very popular and has a strong hold on the people of Britain, but the late government was in power for a number of years and during that time made many enemies.

Ordinarily the life of a government does not exceed eight to ten years. People are fickle. They like a change occasionally. Often they will switch their vote just for the sake of a change. They forget what they once considered faults and the grossness of political crimes fades and gradually turns into virtue.

There is the possibility that the country may be divided into factions with labor, Liberal and Lloyd George parties all opposed to the new government yet having little homogeneity. The outcome will be watched, not only by former residents of Great Britain but by all who take an interest in the march of world events.

Dr. Lyman Abbott

Was International Figure.

Dr. Lyman Abbott, whose death was recorded yesterday, was an international figure. He was known in Canada almost as well as in the United States. His articles were read on this side the boundary with just as great interest as they were in his home land.

His weekly journal, "The Outlook," came next the family Bible in many homes and brought an understanding of world events and of American politics before the people of both countries in a way not before attempted.

Dr. Abbott was an old man but up to quite recently he continued to send messages through his writings to a great number of people.

Trade With States And The Tariff.

Displacing the United States as Canada's best customer, in favor of Great Britain, says the New York Times, is one effect of the United States "protective" tariffs. "Not only is our tariff driving Canada to trade elsewhere, it is also compelling us to export capital which might be kept at home if our trade were freer in both directions."

"American farmers," continues the Times, "who cannot understand how it was possible for the price of their wheat to fall when 'protected' in both the emergency and permanent tariffs, may find instruction in Canadian statements that Americans have been buying Canadian grain for export to England, and that is the explanation of the unusual credit balance for Canada in foreign trade."

Alluding to the fact that for the first time in three years Canada, in August last, had an excess of imports over exports of $6,000,000, the Times asserts that at that rate Canada will shortly be able to remove its embargo on exports of gold. The true way to correct exchanges, says the Times, is to correct trade conditions. When gold cannot move owing to legal restrictions, the alterations of rates lose both their significance and their power.

HEATED DISCUSSION TAX SALE MATTERS

Council Passes Resolution Calling Upon City Treasurer to Act Free at Sales—Kerr and Collart

The report of the city treasurer and collector regarding the recent tax sale was dealt with by the city council last night when it was received and filed.

In connection with it a resolution by Ald. Collart and Ald. Montgomery that the city treasurer in future carry on the auction sale of lots with the help of the city hall staff during regular city hall hours without extra pay was passed. Ald. McLeod was the only member of the council to vote against it, he feeling that more consideration should be given the matter and that it was hardly a matter for this year's council to decide upon since the tax sale for this year was over.

The discussion on the tax sale subject also caused a passage of words between Acting Mayor Kerr and Ald. Collart, the former accusing the latter of making statements in open council and not acting upon them in committee. Ald. Collart, in replying, said that he had been on the council but one term but he had always done his duty and was of the opinion that in one year he had done more work than Ald. Kerr in his ten years of service.

GIRL DIVER SEEKS SPANISH TREASURE

Trying to Secure Gold and Jewels in Tobermory Bay

LONDON, Oct. 24.—The profession of deep sea diving, which anyone would classify as a calling particularly fitted for men, has been successfully invaded by a woman, Margaret Naylor, an English girl, is acclaimed as one of the most efficient and daring wearers of the helmet in British waters.

She has gained a wide reputation during the last two years and more recently for her efforts in the recovery of treasure from the sunken Spanish galleon lying in ten fathoms of water near the shore of Mull, an island off Scotland. There, in the cozy little harbor of Tobermory, and less than a hundred yards from the beach, lies one of the great treasure ships of the Spanish Armada. The boat was one of the many vessels launched by the ambitious Philip, in 1588, for his attempted conquest of England.

Crown Is There

So certain was this monarch that he would add the British Isles to his already large domains, that he actually sent on his jeweled regalia in advance. It is believed today that the richly jeweled crown is lying somewhere in the sixty feet of water among the wreckage of the Admirante de Florencia, which Miss Naylor has succeeded in negotiating.

Although the task presents many problems which would cause anxiety to divers of the stronger sex, Miss Naylor shows no fear. She had had one or two narrow escapes from death in the course of her experience, without being in any way deterred from tackling the risky business again.

Miss Naylor recently made a trip to the southern coast of England and obtained some excellent specimens of undersea plant life. She nearly lost her life when her feet became entangled in a ladder which she was using, and only her presence of mind enabled her to free herself and be hauled safely to the top.

The Man in the Moon SAYS:-

HENRY Ford is lucky again. The only way the Canadians can expect to beat the Yankee racer is to build a schooner and name her Lizzie.

THERE seems to be a hoodoo on that school. Perhaps the trouble is that the city voted "wet" at the plebiscite a year or two ago.

NOW hear the little lion roar about what he would have done if he had been mayor of Prince Rupert instead of Rochester.

"WATCH out for the tides" is a motto all sportsmen should read, mark, learn and remember.

NOW that the Soviet is on top in Siberia and is learning a few of the arts of civilization, it is to be hoped she will let us ship her some grain through the port of Prince Rupert.

NOW that the Yanks have beaten the Canucks in racing fishing schooners, the thing for them to do is to hedge future races around with impossible obstacles.

THE next step for Henry after beating the Canadians is to run for President. He might show his opponent a clean pair of heels in that race.

I SHOULD like to draw a few moral lessons about humility and the necessity of the people of Nova Scotia looking forward instead of backward and of watching out for just such speedy people as Henry Ford and I should like to urge them to see that they are not left behind in the race of life, but I'm afraid of the scowls of the local bluenose boys. I should also like . . . but why risk my friendship with a lot of fine men?
