CAPTURE OF MOONSHINERS

Had Large Still on Small Island and Well Camouflaged

EXCITING CHASE

Revenue Officers Secured Large Wagon Load of Apparatus

Alberta's largest commercial moonshine distillery now reposes in the Royal Canadian Mounted police barracks, and one J. W. Brown, alias Wood, etc., is held in the provincial police cells awaiting trial. This is the result of a raid made by H. Fidler of the inland revenue department. Ernest Fidler of the customs and excise branch, and Constable Moen of the R.C.M.P., between one and two a.m. on a farm lying between Ucas and Ardrossan.

On Tuesday evening the officers proceeded to the farm and knowing that the house was tenanted, concealed themselves and waited patiently, being rewarded at midnight by seeing the men come out, hitch up their team to a loaded wagon and proceed about their scientific researches.

Religious Atmosphere

Immediately the wagon had gone, a hurried search of the cabin was made, but nothing was revealed except the fact that the inmates were apparently of a religious turn of mind, a book entitled the "Heavenly Way" being discovered on the floor sill, where its owner had apparently been recently improving his mind.

Following the creaking wagon, the officers came to a large wet slough, into the centre of which the team was driven, presently disappearing into a dense clump of willow brush. It was moonlight and between one and two in the morning as the officers commenced to cross the slough, jumping from one swaying tussock of grass to another, bent double and proceeding with caution. Nearing the willows, from whence low voices could be heard, the trackers saw three men on the wagon engaged in putting off sacks of grain, barrels and other materials necessary to the manufacture of home brew. Closer the officers crept, when suddenly through the midnight air came a sudden yapping from a dog belonging to the brewers, and the game was up.

Threw Overboard

In less time than it takes to tell it, the three men frantically threw the remainder of the cargo overboard, the horses were belabored and the wagon plunged across the slough for the solid ground. Though out of breath from previous exertions, the officers raced after the runaway, and gaining terra firma charged madly through the poplar and willow brush, guided by the noise of the retreating wheels, and various sacks of sugar, grain and other materials thrown out of the wagon as the men drove at headlong speed through the dark woods.

Suddenly the officers came on one of the men, endeavoring to unhitch the team, with the intention of abandoning the wagon, and using the horses for flight. Immediately he saw his pursuers he faded into the bush however and disappeared, to be captured later.

Amid Willows

The horses were promptly hitched up again, and the party returned to investigate the still. This proved to be most cunningly devised. Placed in the centre of the slough on a small island of dry ground, it was protected on three sides by dense willows; on the fourth it was more open but skillfully camouflaged, the main tank being painted green and so closely resembling the surrounding bush that it would be impossible to detect it. Close to the location was a nice little spring of clear water, and in general the conditions were ideal for the manufacture of firewater, had it not been for the interference of the revenue men.

The plant itself was built on a commercial basis, and is the largest yet captured, the tank in which the mash was simmering being four feet wide, four deep, and twelve long, which would hold possibly 1,000 gallons. The brewers had no intention of giving away the location by a tell-tale column of smoke and had several heaters fed with coal oil through piping, one of which was home made, the other apparently being the work of a foundry.

Horses Nearly Mired

Not including the tank and sundry barrels, the apparatus, when loaded, made a large sized wagon load and the officers had considerable difficulty in getting it to dry land; the whole turned turtle once, and the horses in drawing went to their bellies in the slough and nearly got mired. Amongst other exhibits in connection with the case area neatly soldered coil of sectional square piping of copper, a copper boiler the size of a barrel, a .41 Colts revolver, and sundry screens, shovels and other necessities. Sugar amounting to 500 pounds, and 600 pounds of wheat were also brought along. The still itself had a capacity of about 60 gallons; everything about the place exhibited care and mechanical ingenuity, and from the general layout it was apparent that the proprietors intended to turn out "good stuff" and in quantities.

Plenty of Sugar

During the past week 800 pounds of sugar had been used in the mash, and Mr. Fidler states that when the case comes to court it will be proved that the company's purchases of sugar ran into three figures. The brewery was provided with a lumber floor, wooden chutes led off into the slough for carrying away the waste materials, and corrugated iron was also found which was evidently to be used for a roof. Taken all round the plant was one of the most complete yet found in Alberta, and but for the inquisitive disposition of the inland revenue department would have been one of the premier manufacturing plants in the west.

The Man in the Moon SAYS:-

The attire of some of the New York ladies who were here with the Rotarians yesterday excited a good deal of admiration.

It is expected that local ladies will be out in travelling suits with skirts omitted.

NO one minds a lady powdering her face, but it should be put on smoothly and not in chunks.

"THE Lord loveth a cheerful giver," says the good book and "the world loves a cheerful liar," say I. That is why politicians succeed.

THE Rotary girls carried off most of the pretty hats worn by the local Rotarians but it is not reported whether the Masonettes have yet stolen the aprons of the Masons.

A GIRL can steal anything, even a man's heart, so the novelists say.

AND when a girl has stolen something she soon sends it into the discard.

JINKS wishes to know who with all their faculties about them would wish to take a Rotarian's hat?

THE difficulty about drinking coffee for lunch is that it is likely to keep one awake all the afternoon.

Talking about June reminds me that while the showers are for the bride, it is the groom who catches thunder after the wedding.

Heart Would Beat like a TRIP HAMMER

Heart trouble has of late years become very prevalent. Sometimes a pain catches you in the region of the heart, now and then your heart skips beats, palpitates, throbs, or beats with such rapidity and violence you think it is going to burst.

You have weak and dizzy spells, sinking sensations, are nervous, irritable and depressed, and if you attempt to walk upstairs or any distance you get all out of breath.

We know of no remedy that will do so much to make the heart regain strength and vigor, regulate its beat and restore it to a healthy normal condition as will

MILBURN'S HEART AND NERVE PILLS

Mrs. Chadwick, Delhi, Ont., writes:—"I had palpitation of the heart, and the worst exercise, such as going upstairs or to a hill, my heart would beat like a trip-hammer and at times I was dizzy-headed and had a sinking sensation as if my time were near."

"A friend suggested I try Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, so I procured three boxes, and by the time the first one was used I began to improve. In all I took six boxes, and now although in my 66th year I feel like a young girl; no dizziness or heart-thumping, and can walk miles without fatigue. At time of my sickness I weighed 120 pounds, now I weigh 150."
