Was An Attempt Made
To Stampede Canada?

A great many people are of opinion that an attempt was made recently to stampede Canada into war. The Financial Post in discussing it says:

"This week Hon. Mr. King, for the Canadian Government, told the Imperial Premier that the Canadian Government, the Canadian people, the Canadian resources, were available for Imperial needs to the last man and to the last cent, but they are not available to support petty schemes of international promoters, international financiers, mediocre politicians or religious fanatics."

"While in some details the present Turkish situation has aspects which may, by mishandling, develop into Imperial problems, the real troubles are primarily due to the efforts to aid the powerful group of men, some of whom are not even of British birth, to extend their political and financial interests. Lloyd George is their chief agent and for several years they have been preparing Winston Churchill to succeed him. The evidence of all this is clear as daylight to those who have been following on the spot, the European developments during the past ten or twelve years, and observers of this situation should not overlook the fact that much of the news furnished to English and Canadian readers is unreliable and shows the sinister influence of men who care nothing for the Empire. The whole group need careful watching."

Winnipeg Paper
Closes Out Plain.

The Winnipeg Free Press editorially says:

"Mr. Meighen's statement in Toronto on Friday would appear to raise a very clear issue in Canadian politics. Mr. Meighen takes the view that it was obligatory upon the Government, upon receipt of the cablegram from the Government of Great Britain, to make a reply which would have committed this country irrevocably to participation in a war in the Near East should one occur. "Though the Dominion Government has made no explicit and formal statement it has let it be known by unofficial intimations that it intended, if a serious situation should develop, to call the Canadian Parliament together and submit the question of participation to it. Mr. Greer, the leader of the Progressives, has declared in express terms the view that Canada should be committed to war only by the action of the Canadian parliament."

"There is thus a very clear issue. Mr. Meighen will, it is to be hoped, pursue the matter further. It will be his privilege at the next session of parliament to give a resolution censuring the government for its failure to discharge what he considers its obvious duty. If the resulting decision is unwelcome to Mr. Meighen, he can seek a judgment from the people at the next general election. Upon no question is it more desirable that there should be a definite and final decision by the Canadian people; and Mr. Meighen will do very great service if he will undertake to uphold in parliament the views which he set forth last Friday in Toronto."

Canada At War
When Britain At War.

"Prior to the change in the status of Canada consequent upon participation in the Peace treaty there was no question as to the position of Canada in the event of Great Britain being at war. Under those conditions Canada was at war, too; but it was left for Canada to decide whether she would take part in the war. The right of Canada to make this decision was affirmed and vindicated over and over again. Thus Sir John A. Macdonald, in 1885, declined to entertain an invitation to send a contingent to Egypt. Sir Wilfrid Laurier repeatedly affirmed Canadian policy along the lines indicated. When the Great War broke out in 1914 Great Britain made no appeal to the Dominions for aid. The action by the Dominions was voluntary; and no one can say that it lacked anything in spontaneity or generosity."

"But apparently in the view of Mr. Meighen and of the Tory newspapers of Canada there has been a change. They hold that the old rule that Canada is at war when Great Britain is at war still holds, but without Canada enjoying her old power to use her discretion as to participation. Mr. Meighen's view is that when the British Government cabled the Canadian Government all the necessary precedents to committing Canada to war were fulfilled; thereafter everything should proceed automatically. Canada would have no alternative but to accept; and thereafter we should be committed to the war, to the extent, of course, of our power, for the day has gone by when we can make war on any limited liability basis."

Up To Parliament
To Decide Matter.

After discussing the constitution of the Irish Parliament which is said to be based on that of Canada and which declares that the Irish Parliament alone is the arbiter of war in that country, the Free Press concludes:

"Mr. Meighen, it seems to us, is bound to seek from parliament the approval of the policy avowed by him at Toronto on Friday, and which is apparently in conformity with an understanding to which he was a party when he was prime minister of this country. That policy is an express admission that Canada can be rightly committed to war anywhere upon any question without any real power by the Canadian Government or the Canadian Parliament to exercise its judgment upon the question. A very clear issue, indeed!"

The Secret of Good Health

Assist
Nature

to normal action

Take

When Nature requires assistance, she will not be slow in conveying to you an intimation of the fact. Decline of energy, inability to sleep well, headache, biliousness, constipation, a general sluggishness of mind and body and any sign of digestive "unrest" should impel you to seek the aid of a reliable medicine without delay. There is no better—no surer—no safer—than this proven remedy.

IN MOVIE LIMERICKSCan't Keep Going Very Long With Competition at Present Rate

The present competition for movie limericks cannot keep up very long. Someone who has just arrived from the south wants to know what are the rules. Well, just this: Ten dollar first prize and second and third in passes to the theatre. Verses must be original limericks dealing with the movies or movie people. There are still all sorts of possibilities in the game and the prize winner may not yet be written. Here are a few recent contributions:

In Rupert's scenario land
Is one who ought to be banned;
Unmindful of heat
Sticks gum on the seat,
And thus I get on my hand.

Celluloid Beau
'Twas seldom to movies I'd go
'Til I met my celluloid beau;
His turn is a scream,
His close-up a dream,
So again I'm off to the show.

Beautiful Actress
There is a beautiful actress called

URGES DEVELOPMENT
OF FOREIGN TRADEGeneral Manager of Manufacturers' Association Would Use
Ship to Open New Routes

WINNIPEG, Oct. 4.—Development of foreign trade on the Pacific coast has been assisted materially by the Canadian government merchant marine, and there is a feeling the service should be extended and some of the ships that are now idle used in opening up new trade channels, according to J. E. Walsh, Toronto, general manager of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, who returned from a tour of the west. Mr. Walsh was a guest at luncheon at the Fort Garry.

Mr. Walsh said the export trade in British Columbia was increasing constantly and some important new markets had been found. The lumber business is good, and there is a scarcity of labor.

The association will send a representative to the Pan-Pacific trade conference, which will be opened in Honolulu, Oct. 18. Several questions affecting trade and its development on the Pacific coast will be considered at the conference.

Mr. Walsh expressed himself as gratified at the manner in which the membership of the association is increasing, especially in the prairie provinces. In Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta it is now 651, there being an increase of 71 this year up to May.

FIVE MORE CLASSES OF POLYTECHNIC ARE OFF TO GOOD START

Five more classes of the Northern Polytechnic Institute got away to a good start last night making a total of seven now in operation.

The most notable attendance last night was that of the dress-making class under Mrs. E. Hudson. About 24 ladies presented themselves and, as a result, the class may have to be divided in two. This course is being given at the Booth Memorial School.

Other classes opening last night were bookkeeping under Howard White at Booth School; machine shop practice under A. Akerberg at the Akerberg-Thomson machine shop; matriculation to university subjects under E. A. Donohoe, B.A., L.L.D., at King Edward School, and sheet metal work and geometry under Norman C. Robinson at Booth School.
