SIMPSON CASE IS CONTINUING

Several More Crown Witnesses Were Examined in Court Today

More evidence from prosecution witnesses in the case of Clarence Flewin and Raymond Kevis charged with the attempted murder of R. Boyd Young, was heard in the provincial police court this morning before Magistrate McMullin.

Clarence Watson, fifteen years old and a school companion of Flewin, told of a threat made in connection with Boyd Young. The witness and accused were standing outside the postoffice at Port Simpson in February, 1920, when Flewin said he would "beat up" Boyd Young if Bert Flewin would pay his fine.

Mr. Hooper, for the crown, asked Watson if he had ever had any conversation with the accused in which Young's name was mentioned. L. W. Palmov, for the defence interjected, to ask if the witness knew the meaning of an oath.

"Do you understand what it means?" queried Mr. Hooper.

"Not to tell lies" came the reply.

"If you do tell lies what happens?"

"I will go to jail."

"What other punishment have you heard of in church if you tell lies?"

"I will go to H—," responded the witness.

Doctor's Evidence

Dr. A. E. Friend, who examined Mr. Boyd Young after the assault, told of finding that his skull was fractured and that he had a hemorrhage. Young was in very decided danger for two months, witness said and there would be a risk for some time to come.

Miss Winnifred E. Jennings told of leaving the Boys' Home on the night in question about 10.30 behind Mr. Young. She soon lost sight of him and when opportunity Constable Watkinson's house heard cries from the direction of Young's shore. She met Dr. Friend just at this time and they started back to the hospital. She heard somebody running across the creek and then crash into the bushes when not far from the old postroom. Two men then came up from the creek and walked fast in front of the witness and Dr. Friend. The taller and thinner one walked on the right about 10 feet away. They disappeared near the post office and Flewin's house.

Mr. Palmov asked witness to swear either one was one of the accused. This she refused to do but said they looked much alike the two walking in front of her.

Saw Accused on Steamer

Mrs. Esther Knott, through Rev. W. H. Pierce as interpreter, told of coming from her house on the island about 10.30 that night accompanied by her little boy. She heard noises on the road and, following up, found Young on the road. Later that night when she got on the steamer Chelohsin she saw the two accused on board. They kept close together and talked to each other. When the witness mentioned Young's name to another passenger, Flewin's face became very red, she said.

Constable Watkinson, of the provincial police force at Port Simpson, told of seeing the two accused on the wharf when he left that afternoon. Kevis wore khaki pants and Flewin was dressed as he was in court. He testified to taking the pair from the Chelohsin off Digby Island and bringing them to Prince Rupert. Examining their luggage at the police office, bloodstains were found on the clothes in the baggage. An effort had been made to take the stain off Kevis' pants. Constable Thornthwaite of the R.C.M.P. told of being present at the arrest.

Bloodstains on Clothes

Constable Alex. Saint, of the local provincial force, told of the accused picking out their own clothes in the police station and previous to that of changing their luggage from the purser on the boat. Constable Saint turned the bloodstains over to Dr. West for examination.

The case is proceeding.
