POLICE REPORT

Chief Vickings Says City is Orderly. Number of Opium Cases

At a meeting of the police commission held in the City Hall last night, the report of Chief Vickings, chief of the city police, was read for the month of September.

The report stated that the total of fines collected amounted to $1,297.00.

Thirty cases were entered, which is a slight increase for the month of August.

Under the Opium and Narcotic Drugs act there were ten charges entered, resulting in six convictions and four dismissals. The offences were all for having opium in possession, and in each case heavy penalties were imposed. In the case of Lem Clacy, an old offender, he was fined $400.00.

Convictions under the government liquor act numbered nine, with three dismissals.

A juvenile court was held during the month, and four young boys were taken before the magistrate who sent them to His Honor Judge Young's court on indictable charges. They were released on suspended sentence.

Thirty-three offences were entered, twenty-five convictions were made, and eight were dismissed.

The chief stated that the city from a police standpoint was in an orderly condition. The report was adopted as read and ordered filed.

HIGH COST OF CITY POLICE

Acting Mayor Kerr Discusses Matter With Other Commissioners at Meeting

HIGHER THAN OTHER CITIES

Commissioner Macdonald Defends His Action and Gives a Thrust Back

The cost of the police department came in for considerable discussion at the meeting of the Commissioners last night. Comparisons were made with other cities to the disadvantage of Prince Rupert.

Acting Mayor George Kerr said it was the first time he had the pleasure of acting on the police commission and would like to call the attention of the police commissioners to the cost of running the police department. Since taking over the position as acting mayor he had gone into details and noticed that the costs of operating the police department had grown very rapidly.

In 1916 the cost of the police department had been $9,435.00, in 1919 $15,823.00, and in 1921, three years later, it had grown to $26,322.00. Taking as a comparison last year's figures, the cost of operating the police force at Nelson, B.C., was $7,785.00, and Nanaimo $41,500. He considered that the local department was all out of order.

Transportation Costs
Commissioner Macdonald: "Perhaps you have not considered that we are some 500 miles from Okalla prison farm to which all our prisoners are taken. A big portion of the amount you have read is taken up in transportation."

Commissioner Shockley asked the acting mayor if he objected to the number of men employed on the local force, and if he wanted the men to work more than eight hours a day and on Sunday. It had been figured to have a sergeant and a man on duty day and night. There had to be somebody on duty day and night and there was a time when there were no policemen outside at all.

Acting Mayor Kerr said he did not object to the method at all. What he wished to emphasize was the growing operating cost of the police department. He understood from the city clerk that this year the police estimates would amount to $30,000. Reference was made to the provincial and city police.

Conditions Change
Commissioner Macdonald said that the mounted and provincial police were nothing to do with the city. His first action as commissioner had been to bring the working hours of the police down from 10 hours to eight hours a day which he considered was sufficient, and with an eight hour day the city could not be efficiently policed with less than seven men. He pointed out the fact that conditions had changed from six years ago. Prohibition, he said had increased a traffic in drugs which was more damnable than the liquor traffic ever was. One hundred per cent of police work was to obliterate crime.

and other atrocious crimes in this city, and if you are going to give any credit you must give credit to the police for this state of things," he said.

300 Per Cent Increase

Acting Mayor Kerr said he had been on the finance committee for the past week, and speaking as an alderman, the raise of 300 per cent in police department costs was too high.

Commissioner Macdonald: "If you get the same efficient service out of your men that we get out of our policemen, who are delivering the goods, you can make a far better showing than you are making today."

Continuing, he said that probably the expenses of the police department could be cut if the provincial government could be induced to establish a jail in the community so that the money would not go into the pockets of the transportation companies. If he could be shown, and he was always cut to be shown, where the costs could be cut to give the same efficiency he was willing to learn. He was out to raise the standard of labor not to lower it.

Before a complaint is made you should be able to show us where the money has been wrongly spent."

Spending Too Much

Acting Mayor Kerr: "I say that your department as a whole is spending too much money some place."

Commissioner Shockley: "You say the hours are all right and you should be able to show us where we can economize."

Acting Mayor Kerr: "You certainly do not need seven men."

Commissioner Macdonald: "You say we have too many men on the force. Show me how it can be done with less on an eight hour day."

GEORGE MUNRO TELLS OF GROCERY BUSINESS

Gives Address to Rotary Club and Mentions Some of Difficulties

The work of a grocer is to assemble goods you think your customer would like and to get the best possible value and distribute them, according to George Munro, who gave a talk about the line of his business at the Rotary Club luncheon yesterday afternoon.

Mr. Munro said it was particularly difficult to get the right goods in Prince Rupert. Fruit and vegetables had to be ordered ahead and often three orders were placed, one ahead of the other. When the first of these was filled, if the quality of the goods was not what was expected, there were two other similar orders following on. Weather conditions affected sales and at this distance from the base of supply it was difficult doing business satisfactorily.

"The main thing is picking the goods," said the speaker. A great many men start in business in a small way on a small capital and without much experience and the public suffer. In groceries there is no standard price. Different wholesalers sell articles at different prices."

Mr. Munro said he started to learn the business in Montreal. Then he worked in a wholesale establishment and later in a wholesale fruit business. After that he started business for himself and had two businesses in the same city until he made a trip west when he decided to sell out and come and throw in his lot in the west. Now he was in Prince Rupert.
