A SATURDAY SERMON

The Light of Life

(Rev. Canon W. F. Rushbrook, St. Peter's Church)

On November 25, 1820, a young man of twenty-eight years stood on the Gloucestershire hills overlooking the Cotswold. The sun was setting in autumnal splendor and, just as it was about to dip behind the western horizon, an evening cloud intervened shutting out its radiant glory. The watcher—one of the cleverest young men Oxford ever graduated, for at the age of 18 he had taken double firsts in classics and mathematics, a feat equalled only by Sir Robert Peel—his poetic instincts stirred by the appealing phenomena, expressed his feelings thus:

"Tis gone that bright and orb'd blaze
Fast fading from our wistful gaze,

"Yon mantling cloud has hid
from sight

"The last faint pulse of quivering light."

Nature's picture suggested its spiritual analogy and, as he wended his way homeward in the twilight, he composed that well-known and well-loved hymn, "Sun of My Soul."

The passionate love of John Keble for his master, Jesus, and the souls of men is well known. The world held out to him many alluring offers but he believed that he could serve God best and man most as the incumbent of a parish, so he settled at Hursley, near Winchester, and bent his splendid talents to a great but humble task—the living and teaching of Christ.

The hymn is an experience and a prayer. It is catholic in its appeal. Personally, I know of no Christian denomination that does not include this poem in its hymnology. All Christians sing it, all love it. Its teaching is fundamental. Surely it suggests the vision of a time when Christian divisions will have ceased.

The first stanza—

"Sun of my soul, thou Savior dear,
"It is not night if thou be near
"O may no earth-born cloud arise
"To hide Thee from thy servant's eyes."

—gives the key to the reason not only of the soul's separation from God but also the church's discord and lack of practical charity.

The cloud between the soul and the Sun of Righteousness is sin in its various subtle forms, pleasure, sometimes pain, worldly interests and the lusts of life. The cloud that shuts out the "Light of Life" from flooding the church with its beams is worldliness, loyalty to creed rather than to Christ—minute man limiting the operation of the infinite God. Thus and thus only can a man get light, cry the contending sects, so chaos reigns and the world is being lost.

The sun has no favorites neither has The Sun of Righteousness. "Learn to detach yourself from all that is capable of being lost. Bind yourself only to that which is absolute and eternal."

KAIENS WON BASKETBALL

Intermediate League

In a hard fought tussle the Merchants just edged out the Warriors 16-11. Although the game was close and fast it consisted of too much individual dribbling which is not appreciated basketball. The Warriors managed to get the ball within shooting range but took too much time to think about it and were pounced on immediately by Merchant guards. The Merchants played a dashing game and every one of their shots were taken under difficulty but they managed to sink enough of them to emerge on the top end of the score.

Merchants—Hunt (10), Pierce (4), Dingwell (2), Windle, Ross, Brentzen.

Warriors—Comadina (6), Gillis (4), Forbes, Fitzpatrick, Antonelli, Hickey (1).

Junior League

The Junior game was entirely one-sided, the Meteors having it all their own way. From the looks of things Santurbane of the Meteors should be hoisted up into the Intermediate league, thus making the Junior games much more interesting.

Meteors—Santurbane (15), Christison (6), Allen (4), Tobey, Hill, Shrubbsall (4).

Rovers—G. Williscroft, McMeekin (2), McRae (2), B. Williscroft, Ivarson, Armstrong, Bremner, Greer (2).

Her Heart Was Weak
Nerves Shaky, Nights Restless

Mrs. A. Black, Wallaceburg, Ont., writes:—"I suffered from heart weakness, shaky nerves, and restless nights."

I saw your advertisement for Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills and decided to try them although I did not have much faith, but now I am very thankful I did as they have proved of wonderful help to me.

I am now strong and well again, but am never without a box in the house."

SCHOOL BOY GETS BIG SURPRISE

Local school boy, with very poor eyesight, got a real surprise when fitted with a pair of glasses by G. F. Davey, Registered Optometrist in charge of the Optical Dept. of Max Heilbronner, Jeweler. His vision had been only about twenty-five percent normal but the glasses gave normal vision so naturally he was surprised when he was seeing just four times as much as he had been seeing before. The parents thought the cost of this service was very reasonable, much lower than they had expected.
