Dissatisfaction Over British Elections.

It is quite easy to understand why there should be dissatisfaction over the calling of a general election in Great Britain just now. There was an election there only a short time ago and doubtless it taxed the resources of the Labor, Socialist and Liberal members much as it does in this country. Now they are called upon to fight another election and face possible if not probable defeat without having enjoyed the honors of parliamentary membership and consequent leadership more than a few months. They are indignant. Of course they are!

Many of the present members of parliament were elected by means of funds collected by passing around the hat. It will be extremely difficult to pass around the hat again, at any rate to the same people. The result will be that some of the present members may not even secure nomination at the forthcoming election. "Anger" is too simple a word to express the feelings of those who are called upon to give up what they thought were secure positions in order to again face the electors on a new political question.

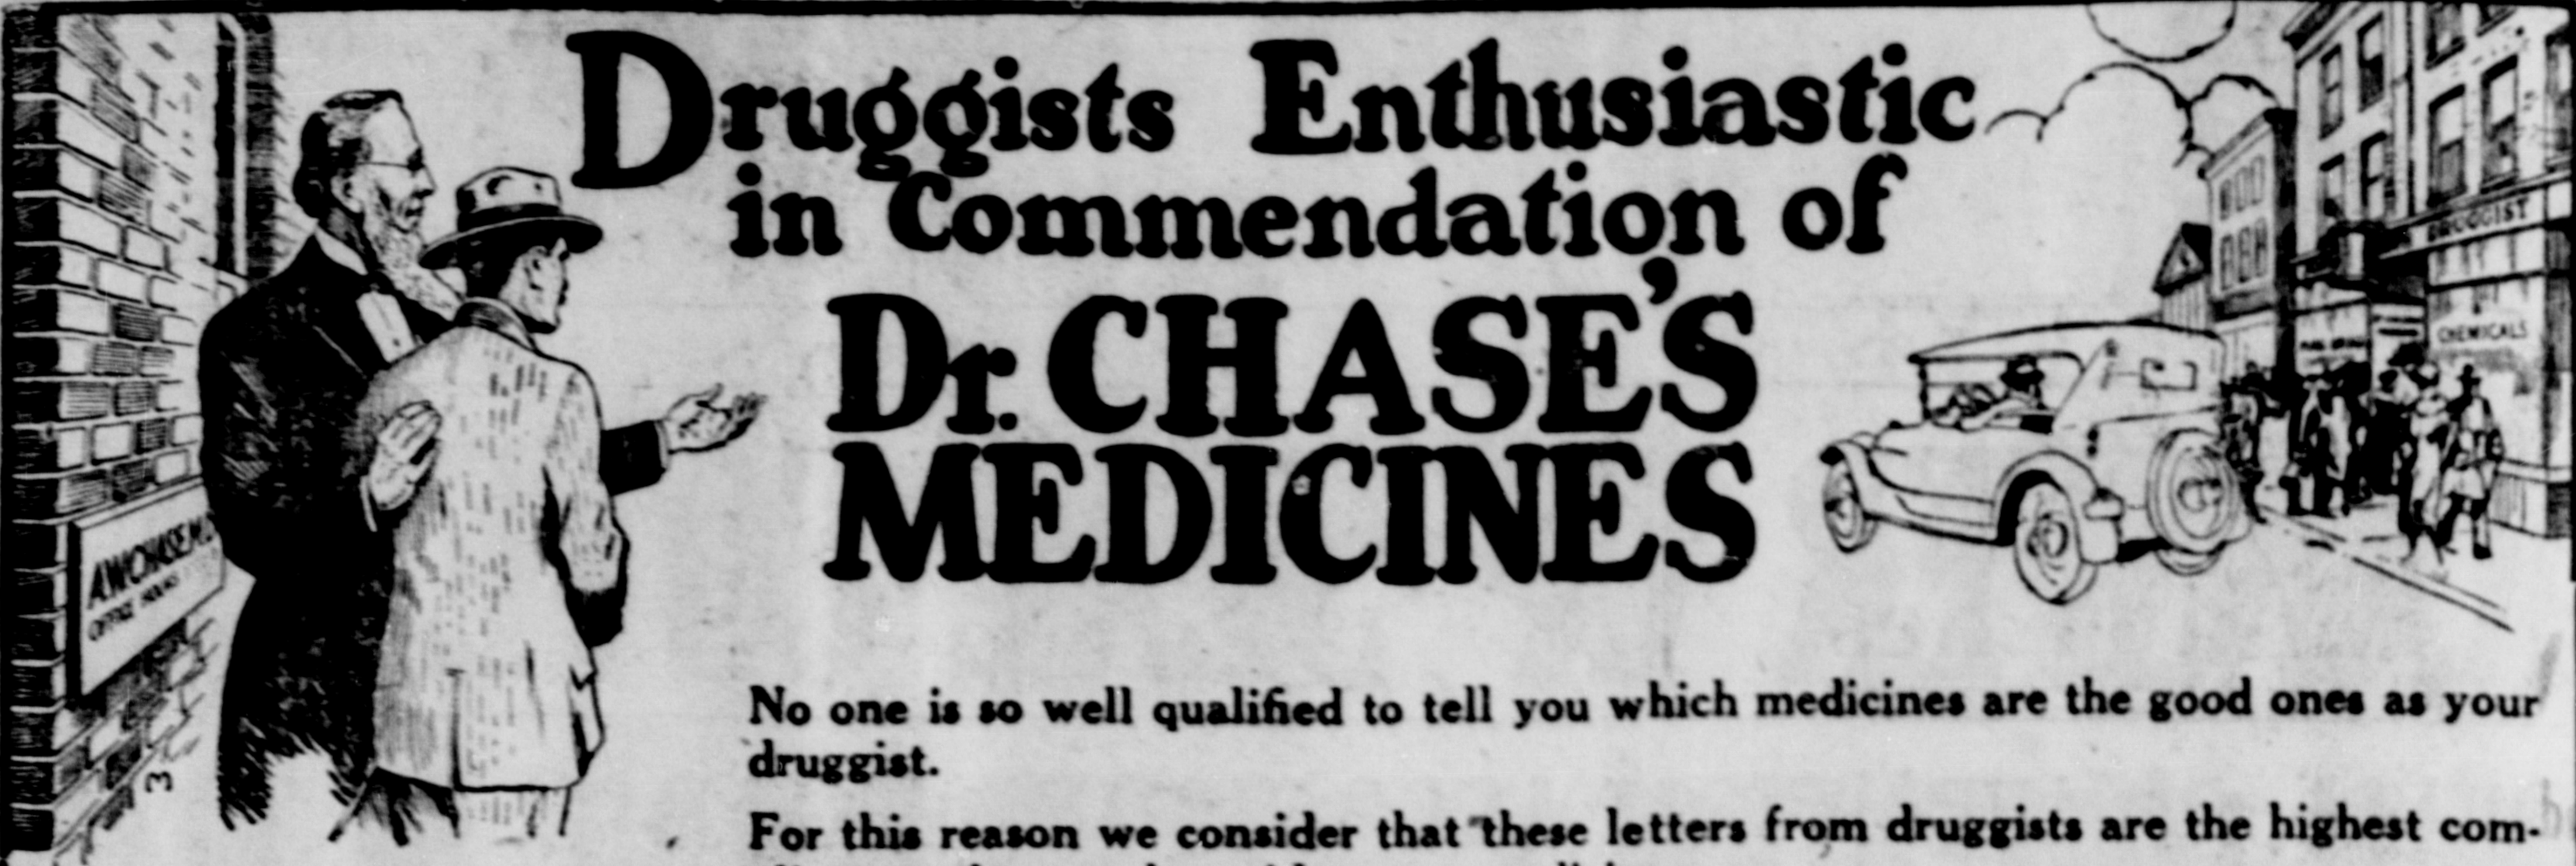

Baldwin's Position Rather Creditable.

Forgetting these trivialities and personalities, and looking at the matter from Premier Baldwin's point of view, it must be acknowledged that it is rather a courageous thing for him to throw up a secure position in order to fight out a cause on which precedent would indicate he was pretty sure to be beaten. Had he been an office seeker, he would not have dared to face the people. He would rather have compromised with the free traders of his own party and held on to his job. Instead of that he did the courageous thing. He looked beyond the bounds of party politics to the great field of empire and decided to trust his case to the people who first elected him. One cannot but admire him.

Can Protection Win In Britain?

So many people are interested in the election being held across the seas that we make no apology for giving a lot of space to it, especially in view of the fact that Canada will be affected directly by the outcome. What people are asking themselves is whether Baldwin can possibly win. Most Liberals or labor supporters who have lived in Britain or who have kept closely in touch with the political situation there are inclined to ridicule the idea. They say the British workingman will never allow protection there. Cheap food and clothes appeal to him too strongly.

They may be right but also they may be wrong. No one can ever say they are sure which way an election will go. People change rapidly and the conditions of unemployment in that country will have made many of them ready to try anything which offers a possible solution of the present economic problem. "Let us give it a trial" will be the suggestion of many and once the idea gets going nothing will stop it. Baldwin may win and protection may very soon be the endorsed fiscal policy of the British government.

WITH the election on in Great Britain we are beginning to learn what some of these Britishers really think of each other. There is nothing like an election to bring out candid speech.

TO ERECT SHELTER IN WESTVIEW FOR SCHOOL CHILDREN

Owing to the bad condition of the road in Westview it was reported to the school board last night that the bus would have to use Second Ave. instead of Graham Ave. and pupils would have to walk some distance and wait for it. In bad weather this was a hardship on the children so it was decided to ask the city council for permission to erect a shelter at the corner of Second Ave. and Seventeenth St.

The matter was brought up by Principal Brady of the High School and discussed at some length.

One side of the Borden Street school must be shingled or thereon made by George Scott to covered with rustic next summer, according to a report from the school board last night.
