HEARTS AFLAME IS THRILLING STORY

Fire in Canadian Woods Pictures as one of Scenes in This Story

Realism is the outstanding feature of Reginald Barker's latest production, "Hearts Aflame," which presents Frank Keenan and Anna Q. Nilsson at the head of a strong cast tonight. From start to finish, the picture carries with it an air of reality and conviction that only sincere effort could produce.

On one occasion during the six months consumed in the filming of the story, he took his entire company up to Cranbrook, British Columbia, where they spent three weeks in the Canadian woods.

Pronounced by D. W. Griffith to be one of the greatest pictures ever produced and a document from life, Richard Barthelmess' new starring production, "Fury," in which Dorothy Gish plays opposite him, is a classic of the ish Columbia, where he spent seven weeks getting wonderful outdoor scenes with an extensive forest of majestic pines as a background for the action.

While in the Canadian woods, the director launched the first thrill of the picture, blowing up a dam and releasing ten thousand huge logs to go racing madly down the river. He had to construct the dam especially for the scene, making it as substantial and as correct from an engineering standpoint as though it were to stay for years. This was necessary in order to hold logs and provide the proper effect in the explosion.

But the greatest feat in the picture, and incidentally one of the most daring projects ever attempted for the screen is the raging forest fire episode which builds up to the powerful climax of the story. Staged under the personal supervision of County Forester Stuart J. Flintham and his force of one hundred deputies. Unlike the way most pictures of the sea are made, Mr. Barthelmess and his supporting company lived for three weeks on an old schooner minus all comforts and conveniences, undergoing the same experiences as fall to the men who still sail the seven seas in wind-jammers.

"In spite of the hardships it was the most fascinating journey I have ever taken," Mr. Barthelmess says. "The mathematics of navigation became clear to me. I learned to read the compass and steer by it. The stories some of the old salts would tell of their

A worth-while Reputation

The head of one of this country's great manufacturing institutions says:

"The Man who builds and the man who buys are both beneficiaries of reputation. To the one it is a continuous spur and incentive--to the other, the strongest of all guarantees that what he buys is worthy."

Patronize the manufacturer or merchant who has a reputation for honesty and fair dealing. Such motives must actuate the consistent advertiser. The man who invests real money in building a reputation for himself and his merchandise cannot afford to risk any of it by taking unfair advantage of his customers. He must retain the good-will of the buying public. Without this, his business cannot succeed.

Every time he advertises he puts his reputation in your hands. His products or the wares he has for sale must make good. His service must be as advertised.

That is why it pays to read advertisements, to deal with advertisers and to buy advertised goods.

experiences were romance carried to the Nth degree.

"It's a lonesome life though, in spite of the fact that you are never alone. There is no privacy. But to be cut off from the world for three weeks, without any communication, not even a wireless, makes you realize isolation as nothing else will. It sure seemed good to buy a newspaper when we rowed into Gloucester and also to feel some of the comforts of home once again."
