Tomorrow Is King's Birthday.

His Majesty George V., King of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland and of the British Dominions beyond the seas, Defender of the Faith and Emperor of India, was born of June 3, 1865, so tomorrow he is 58 years of age. He is the second son of the late King Edward VII. and the Dowager Queen Alexandra. He was married on July 6, 1893, to Princess Victoria Mary of Teck and succeeded to the throne on the death of his father, May 6, 1910. He has five living children, Prince Edward of Wales, heir-apparent, Prince Albert, Princess Mary Lascelles, Prince Henry and Prince George.

In voicing the time-honored wish, "Long Live the King," patriotic subjects in the same voice wish for long preservation of the Empire over which the monarch is the nominal head.

Four years of universal turmoil of war have featured the reign of King George V., but happily the Empire and its Allies rose in victory over the persecutors of the world. On the occasion of the King's birthday it is to be hoped that he may have many more peaceful years of reign but, if the occasion should ever again arise, that Britain's sons shall meet the occasion for all time in the future as they have done for long years of the past.

Tomorrow is the King's birthday but, Monday has been named as the official day of celebration.

Drifting Into Alleyways Of Talk.

A drawback in the practice of modern conversation is the drifting proclivity shown by so many talkers. Sometimes it seems as if it were growing to be a harder task all the time for people to reach the point they want to make. They drift into alleyways of talk. They may set out to describe something definite or to build up an argument, when a word let fall touches some string of recollection which sets the current of their talk in another direction, often wholly irrelevant to the subject under discussion. There is the experience then, for the listener, of hearing something he did not set out to hear so that he has to wait patiently until the talker reverts to the original theme, which he does eventually just as if there had never been a break in the course of thought. Talk of this character is distracting. It tends to illustrate why conversation is becoming one of the lost arts.

It is not given to many to be able to say what they want to say in terse, logical language in which every word is pregnant with meaning. What is, however, among the most jarring experiences in modern conversation is that it is those with the shortest vocabularies who talk the longest. Many are painfully unaware of their habit of repeating themselves, and, indeed, as often as not, show a smug satisfaction at being able to exhaust the patience of their auditors. They take a pride in being verbose. The whole trouble, if it may be characterized as such, lies in the penchant exhibited by so many to drift into alleyways of thought. It would seem as if our educational system does not make good conversationalists. It is a system which does not seem to stretch the knowledge of a vocabulary to the art of conversation. The diffident, although generally the best informed, are slow to speak; the loquacious work all the words they know overtime in the effort to impress their hearers. Modern conversation is a strange jumble in which adjectives abound; in which redundancy and tautology are too distinguishing characteristics.

More Graceful Language Needed.

Clear thinking, if we were to measure it by conversational powers, is not at a premium, for clear thinking implies few words and these always straight and to the point. Where talk is constantly running into alleyways there is something wrong with the mental equilibrium. There is no conversation more potent than that which is conducted in straight flung words and few; there is none more delightful than when it is adorned with literary grace and well rounded sentences. What is wanted to restore the art of conversation is a cultivation of logic. It is necessary towards promoting an ability to talk well and interestingly. In our whole educational system what is wanted more than anything else is a better knowledge of the English language so that the mass of our pupils who show application can employ it for conversational purposes in its grace and usefulness and so raise the whole tone of social intercourse. —Victoria Colonist.

"I Avoided an Operation Appendicitis Disappeared"

Mrs. James Wells, Ufora, Ont., writes:—

"I took a severe pain in my right side. It was very bad at times. I tried oils and tablets without gaining any relief. The doctor pronounced it chronic appendicitis. I dreaded an operation and a friend advised Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. I used them and not only obtained relief from pain, but I believe it has completely freed me of appendicitis, as it is now over a year since I have had any of the old symptoms."

MEETING OF ANYOX COMMUNITY LEAGUE

Taking Steps Towards Establishment Kindergarten in Smelter Town

ANYOX, June 2.—The regular weekly meeting of the Community League council was attended by President Lewis, Vice-President Callanan, Councilors Mrs. Dwyer, Mrs. Cloke, Messrs. Jones, Harper, Noel and Simpson.

The secretary's report informed the council that the secretary of the Tennis Club had turned in $244 collected in dues from members and that the finance committee had authorized the purchase and installation of a fan for Recreation Hall, which would be wired for immediately. The building of additional seating accommodation at the ball grounds had also been authorized. The International Service Club had guaranteed two hundred dollars for the visit of the baseball and football teams to Stewart. This would not have been quite enough if the Granby Co. had not assisted in the transportation of the players. As a result of this trip there was a little left over, which would be held to the credit of summer sports until the close of the season. The report suggested the thanking of the people of Stewart for the hospitality extended the representatives of Anyox while there on Empire Day, also the managers of the baseball and football teams as well as those who helped make the children's day such a splendid success. Progress was reported in connection with the proposed summer camp.

Dr. Harper thought that one motion would be sufficient to cover the thanks of the council to the people of Stewart for their hospitality on May 24, the managers of the baseball and football teams who went to Stewart, the volunteers who helped to make the children's field day a success, and the Anyox brass band for its splendid turnout for the sports.

Situation at Mine

The chairman talked on the Mine Club and the situation at the Mine. The members of that organization stated it was impossible for the Mine Club to function unless they could get control of the pool room there. The chairman then asked the secretary to explain the situation. The secretary briefly outlined this and stated that when the Mine Club was formed there was a tentative understanding that if the club could organize practically one hundred per cent on the hill, that the league would have no objections to turning over the activities there as covered by the pool room and soft drink stand. This had not been done because the Mine Club had not been able to bring about the unity desired. Now under new officials, the Mine Club felt that if the control of the pool room and stand was turned over to the club all difficulties would be smoothed over. After some discussion, the council agreed that in the event of the Mine Club being successful in amalgamating all interests at the mine, the operation of the pool room there would be turned over to it and the secretary was instructed to notify the Mine Club officially to this effect.

Mrs. Dwyer introduced the matter of a kindergarten for Anyox, and called attention to the number of children between the ages of four and six who were not taken care of in any scheme of things. Mrs. Cloke spoke on the same lines and to the same purpose. Considerable discussion followed, the final decision being that the secretary get fullest possible information on the cost of such an institution. The chairman appointed Mrs. Dwyer, Mrs.

Cloke and Mr. Noel as a committee for the purpose.

Band Wants Help

A delegation from the band waited on the council for the purpose of getting some financial assistance. This delegation consisted of D. C. Roy, manager of the band, and G. A. Kribbs. Both gentlemen spoke of the service to the community rendered by the band and stated that if the council could grant the organization $25 a month it would enable the band to finance a number of small necessities. The council decided to recommend this amount be donated to the band by the finance committee.

This is an old friend in a new form. It is Gillett's famous 100% Pure Lye—in Crystal Flakes instead of Powder.

Why Flakes instead of Powder?

Because, during the many years that Gillett's Lye has been helping Canadian housewives to keep everything clean and sanitary, it has been our constant endeavor to improve it for general use.

Many people found that the dust from powdered lye was objectionable.

But the Flakes are exactly right.

Gillett's Flake Lye goes just where you want it to go—and nowhere else.

Full and clear directions come with each package.
