BY NO MEANS ALLOW YOUR BOWELS TO GET CONSTIPATED

If you allow your bowels to become constipated you will have bilious attacks, sick headaches, coated tongue, foul breath, sallow complexion, specks floating before the eyes, whites of the eyes dull and yellow, heartburn, water brash, etc.

Keep your bowels regular by using Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills, as by doing so you will be able to keep well and have no more trouble with your liver.

Mrs. I. Rubin, Halbrite, Sask., writes: "I was very badly troubled with constipation, often had bad headaches, my tongue was coated, and I felt anything but well."

After taking Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills I have felt much better as they certainly did me a lot of good."

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills are 25c a vial at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

CANADA IS AN EXAMPLE TO REST OF WORLD SAYS W. L. MACKENZIE KING IN LONDON.

of their history would probably have to be rewritten from these original records. A few days before it had been his privilege to receive them from the hands of Sir Leicester Harmsworth, in memory of his brother, the late Lord Northcliffe, a very valuable collection of papers, known as the Monckton collection. They related to the commissions which were given to General Monckton, and subsequently to General Wolfe before he left for Canada. They might picture the feelings of Canadians in possessing, in the original manuscript, the orders given by the Minister of War to General Wolfe—the secret orders which he was not to open until he had left the country, and the various communications that he himself read as he went up the St. Lawrence and thought of the great battle ahead. All these things were there told, in his own hand-writing—not only that, but one saw, in the hand-writing of General Wolfe, a plan for the administration of Canada, should it be God's will that the country should come into the possession of Britain; also the terms of capitulation, in his own hand-writing. Associated with these were also records of the great man who was Wolfe's opponent in the conflict—Montcalm.

League of Nations
These records had been presented to the nation in a very beautiful form, bound in red morocco, embossed in gold; they formed a collection which the nation would prize as one of its great treasures. It meant a great deal to them to have the story of their nation, beginning with the romantic history of its earlier days, and following the successive developments down to the present moment, with their record of political evolution. They had gone through the period of Crown Colonies, they had worked out their representative institutions and a system of responsible government, and had become a Dominion. In a miniature way, they were a League of Nations which went to make up the British Empire, and still further suggestive of the larger League which they hoped would come more and more into being as a great reality for the purpose of uniting together all those who had common aims and common objectives towards the peace of the world.

Canada's Example
"We have had our differences in Canada," continued Mr. King. "We have had our wars between races; we have had our political revolutions, but we have learnt how to bring out of these differences a unity which emphasises the things which we have in common rather than the things which divide us. That, it seems to me, is the great service which Canada has rendered as an example to other parts of the world. The antipathies of past generations lie buried. We have there, side by side, people who have fought, and who have demonstrated to the world that having fought they were able to work together and to construct a nation. We have learnt how to live and let live, and how to forget and forgive. God grant that, whatever else the Imperial Conference we are now holding may do for the British Empire as a whole, we may bring out the one great truth I have sought to emphasise, that, between different nations and different continents, the things that we all have in common are vastly greater than the things that divide us."

In a reference to conditions in Canada, the Prime Minister said the country had turned the corner and was rapidly coming back into its old normal state. Everything considered, he thought the coming year should be one of great prosperity for the Dominion, and he hoped this part of the Empire would feel that Canada was a land which offered great opportunity for investments of every kind—men, money and markets—all three would be welcome from this particular source.

Fisheries Treaty
Dealing with criticisms of the Halibut Fisheries Treaty with the United States, Mr. King pointed out that no citizen of the Empire or of any part of the world could have engaged in the fisheries except from the shores of British Columbia or of the Western States. So far as domestic concerns went, they felt that they had full rights of self-government, and that as regards matters of trade and tariffs and the like it had long been established that they had the right of negotiating with their neighbors or any other countries. In addition, there was at the present time a treaty between the United States and Canada under which matters in dispute as regards levels of lakes, power, fisheries, etc., might be referred to a joint commission. Some 20 different questions had been referred to it in the past few years, and in every case but one the commissioners had been unanimous in their finding. They could, if they so desired, have referred this particular question to the Commission, and the agreement would have been signed by the Commissioners. When an arrangement had been come to about bird sanctuaries some years ago, the question was referred to London and had to be settled through the Ambassadors; but that day was past.

Not Discourteous

"Some," remarked Mr. King, "have gathered the impression that in asking to have the Minister of Marine and Fisheries given plenipotentiary powers to sign the agreement we were doing something discourteous to the British Ambassador at Washington. Nothing was further from the mind of anyone. We were only asking for what was done at Versailles and Washington, where our Ministers signed on behalf of Canada in so far as Canada was concerned—that we should have the same right in negotiating that treaty. I feel that it does not take away from the prestige of the British Empire as a whole that a Canadian Minister should have authority given him by the King to sign a document with full plenipotentiary powers where the matter is one that relates so exclusively to his own country and its neighbor. But were any international question to come up which would affect other parts of the British Empire, or which would be of vital concern to any one of them, I would be among the first to say that no steps should be taken by any government of any part of the Empire without the full knowledge and consent of all; and that where we are all vitally concerned, or where the questions are of higher politics, involving the prestige of the whole Empire, the signature should be that of one person who would represent the British
