A Financial Session At Ottawa.

In the coming session of parliament financial matters will occupy a foremost place in the discussions, says the Winnipeg Free Press. This is an indication of the new era in which we are living. The session will be devoted largely to the questions of national expenditure, taxation and other financial matters because those are the things in which the people are most keenly concerned at the present time. The main test for the government is likely to lie in the way in which it stands up to these problems.

Both the Progressives and the Conservatives will be unsparing in their criticism of all expenditures the urgency of which is not clearly demonstrated. The government is likely to be put on the defensive also in regard to the new sales tax which goes into force at the first of the year. The Ontario branch of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association lately expressed strong opposition to it and urged that it be replaced by a turn-over tax. Following this up, they brought to Toronto, a few days ago, Mr. Meyer D. Rothchild, chairman of the United States Business Men's Tax committee, to explain the advantages of a turn-over tax as compared with a sales tax. The Mail and Empire, one of the leading Conservative newspapers of the country, also declares that the new sales tax "has produced dismay in business circles, and hopes are entertained that the date on which it is to come into effect will be deferred so as to give the government a chance to bring in legislation to repeal the intolerable impost." It declares that the new tax would be vexatious in its working and that it would also be "insufferably burdensome." One of Mr. Meighen's main points of attack on the government is that, through failure to cut down expenditure, the government is imposing such heavy taxation that people are being driven out of the country. It would be very easy, of course, to ask Mr. Meighen what his own government did to cut down expenditure and hasten the time when the country would stop adding to its already stupendous debt—and, particularly, what the building of ships for the Canadian Merchant Marine, after the need for them had passed, has done to facilitate a reduction of taxation.

Country In Serious Mood.

The strength of the financial criticism of the present government will lie in the fact that the country is in a serious mood and demands that all governments make their control of expenditures and their handling of the problem of taxation the supreme test of their fitness for office. Recrimination has been a common method of the past in dealing with attacks on a government, but that in itself is no longer sufficient. The only thing that will count is results and the clear justification by a government of all its financial policies. In so far as it can do this will it deserve public support.

There is much that the government at Ottawa can do in that direction if it will. The country has been given to understand that the budget may balance during the present fiscal year, or that the deficit will be comparatively small if there is one. It will be to the credit of the government if it can comb the estimates for next year so as to keep expenditure within the national revenue and, if possible, to make some reduction in taxation. A return to the two-cent postal rate would also be very welcome and it is quite possible that it would mean no loss to the government, because a reduction in postal rates invariably leads to an increased volume of business.

Further Revision Of Bank Act.

In connection with the further revision of the Bank Act there is a plain duty before the government in the matter of providing for government inspection of banks. The disclosures in the Home Bank failure have shown that the public needs this protection, and it has been stated on behalf of the banks that they will not oppose government inspection. The demands of the Home Bank depositors for compensation from the government will doubtless be strongly pressed in parliament, as it was in the case of the Farmers' Bank some years ago. The government, however, can hardly do otherwise than follow the course taken by parliament then in refusing to admit any responsibility or grant compensation for the losses sustained by bank depositors.

With Hon. W. S. Fielding, a veteran minister of finance, unable to be present during the coming session, when financial matters will be right to the fore, the government will be under a handicap. That, however, will not justify the government in marking time. There are, moreover, many of these financial matters in which the course of the government should be fairly plain and which afford it the opportunity of showing whether it is in office to serve primarily the interests of the people.

Members of the Board of Works stated the new crusher would have a capacity of 80 yards per day.

KOTARY CLUB IS URGED TO MAKE KNOWN LATENT WEALTH THIS DISTRICT.

Difficulty had been experienced in the past in getting a market for hemlock but this had been rectified last year. It had been proven that western hemlock was equal to fir. The railroads would not use it owing to a prejudice towards the eastern hemlock. However, in the last year a market had been found in the Orient, and now it was getting a better price for hemlock than for spruce. If the world only knew the colossal amount of hemlock in this northern country the district should be able to guarantee enough Jap squares to supply three or four freighters a month. The manufacture of Jap squares did not take a great deal of capital but he realized that he was too small financially to take care of the great Oriental market in the way in which it could be taken care of. It was up to all to let people know these possibilities who were interested in the lumber business. Mr. Hanson pointed out the trouble was that the big lumbermen had not come into the country to increase the output to the maximum capacity. If there were such lumbermen here as J. R. Booth operating the northern country as a lumber producer would soon be established.

Railway Helped

The speaker paid tribute to the Canadian National Railway's whose officials had assisted the northern mills to a great extent in securing the present export business in the Orient. He thought it was up to the people of the north to try and keep the business going. It would be a matter of disgust to him to see, now that they had an entry into the Oriental market, this market drop out. Mr. Hanson said that there were more timber resources lying north of the Queen Charlotte Sound and along the Canadian National Railway than Sweden, Norway and the Baltic provinces had when they started to supply the world 60 years ago. The only advantage those countries had over us was that they were nearer the European market. However, in his mind there was no reason why these countries should be shipping pulp and timber to the United States, New Zealand, Australia and as far north as Seattle.

In thanking the speaker for his address, President Dr. Grant spoke of the future development of the natural resources and said that it was up to individual to see the opportunity and that such development depended largely upon the people themselves. Being an old timer here, he had noticed that the people of the country did not depend upon themselves to the degree that they might do and he felt that they might do something more to help themselves. It had been possible for the business men of Prince Rupert to have leased the local mill and have reaped the benefit of sawing aeroplane spruce but the opportunity had been allowed to pass. He could not help but wonder why the Dominion government in their recent bond issue could raise the sum of $250,000,000, and yet the people of the country would not invest in the development of their own natural resources and allowed them to get into the hands of Americans who could see the possibilities and were willing to do something. He mentioned the fact that Mr. Hanson had been one of the men who seeing the wonderful possibilities in the natural resources around him had done something to develop them. The opportunity was here for every young man and it was up to him to help himself and the country in keeping the resources

The Man in the Moon SAYS-

Oh no, Mother, there is no need to worry about Jim's health. These symptoms of piety and unnatural goodness are quite reasonable. You know what's coming next month.

Father need not worry about his pocket book either. Children demand things that are new and interesting and modern, rather than expensive gifts.

Yes, it is true he has a lot of young people to remember and buy presents for, but hundreds of factories know this and have been making things for twelve months to help him out of his difficulties.

From the new fur or the new winter suit you are hoping he may buy for you, to the tiniest toy for the smallest of the babies the advertisements in the paper should be your guide.

At this time of year when you are planning ahead, let your thinking be of some value.
