

Weird Story of Haida Witch and Young Brave

Told to Thomas Deasy

At one time there were five Indian towns, one behind the other at Kweys Kwen, Langara Island. Each town was thickly populated and the people lived in peace and happiness.

In the course of time the daughter of a witch who lived there became engaged to be married to a very popular young man. They both belonged to the town which faced west toward the ocean. The witch at times performed wonders before the people while the young man worked for his proposed wife, living in the same house where she lived.

One morning the young man had breakfast in bed and while tearing some dried fish made a noise, which seemed to come from under the bed cover. The witch insulted him and told him he would have to go out and split the end of a cedar log.

The young man was much offended and immediately rose up and, wandering through the woods, came to a lake located behind the five towns. He saw a cedar tree standing beside the lake and he chopped it down, split the end, opened it wide and put a cross piece into the seam. He also made a long rope and coiled it up by the log.

Fierce Monster

Then the young man went back to his town and killed a child and taking the body to the lake tied it to the end of the rope and let it down through the split log to the bottom of the lake. No sooner had it touched the bottom than he felt something moving on the end of the line. He hauled it up and a fierce looking monster came to the surface holding the dead child over its face. He hauled it up, face outward between the ends of the split log, knocked out the cross piece and the sides of the log came together holding the fierce monster tight and squeezing it to death.

The man at once skinned the creature, took the skin to his home town and hung it on a tree. He then planned to use the skin in the capture of whales which were the chief food of the island.

Seeing advantage to herself in the prospect of her son's successful hunt, the witch told the people she had seen a vision and she predicted that a great whale was to be delivered to the people the following morning. When the morning arrived, her predictions came true and she won the admiration of the people. She then held ceremonies each evening and predicted that during the night whales would be delivered by her god. The people did not know that the whales were captured by her son using the skin of the monster.

Made Big Haul

Time passed and the young brave planned to make a big haul of whales in one night bringing in ten. His mother-in-law through her uncanny powers, became aware of this and immediately predicted that her god was going to deliver ten whales, and the people believed her. When morning came the great monster was in sight from the shore and the people watched the peculiar looking creature, gradually increasing in size as it came nearer. Finally it came right up to the beach bringing ten whales, six on its back and four in its huge mouth. The witch went down to meet it and claimed that it was her god that had brought the whales. She was dressed in her dancing dress and ruffles and the people were much impressed. Just then, however, the young bridegroom came out of the huge mouth of the monster and insultingly said it with irony "Mother-in-law must be a wonderful witch." So great was the shock to the woman who was in

FEDERAL GEOLOGISTS MAKE THEIR REPORTS

Volume Issued by Department of Mines Containing Interesting Information for All Interested in Mining

A detailed report on geological conditions on the section of the coast, including both mainland and islands between Douglas Channel on the south and the Alaskan boundary on the north appears in a volume which has just been issued from the federal department of mines. The report was prepared by Dr. V. Dolmage who spent last year on geological mapping in the district.

The report contains description of the general character of the district from a geological standpoint and deals with all varieties of metals mentioning most of the mining properties existing. It presents very valuable information for prospectors and those interested in mining generally.

The volume also contains a report by Dr. George Hanson on geological reconnaissance made between the Kitsault and Skeena Rivers last year. Dr. Hanson continued similar work in the district this year.

MANY ADVANCES RETAIL MARKET

Sugar and Smoked Meats go up and Butter Will Follow

FLOUR IS DROPPING AND SO WILL FEED

The price of flour is dropping on the local market and a reduction in food prices may be expected within the next week.

The sugar market advanced twice last week, 15c on Tuesday and 25c on Friday per hundred pounds. A raw sugar advance on the New York market warrants further immediate advances here but this condition will possibly ease off when the heavy canning season is over.

Now is the time for housewives to do their canning of fall fruits for prices are at their lowest and the supply of peaches will soon be closing. Plums are all over being replaced by prunes and British Columbia pears are coming. There are price reductions in the most of vegetable and fruit lines.

Pumpkins, Hubbard squash, vegetable marrow and citron are just making their appearance here.

The orange market is very firm with advances of from 50c to $1.00 a case during the past fifteen days.

The potato market is firm on good keeping stock while cheaper grades grown by Chinese are weak at the mercy of the buyers' market.

The butter market advanced three cents on Tuesday preceded by two one cent advances during the previous fourteen days. Butter is still being sold in the city, however, at former prices which will advance soon.

Cheese is firm, having advanced 1c to 2c per week for the past three weeks on the wholesale market. The retail market, however, will not permit of further advance.

The egg market is firm and local eggs are scarce.

Meats are very uncertain and packers are not accepting orders for future deliveries especially pork which is expected to advance soon.

Smoked meats, ham and bacon, have already advanced from 3c to 5c a pound on better grades.

B. C. Mackintosh apples, which are recognized to be far superior to American grown Mackintoshes, will arrive during the coming week. The opening price will be less than $3.00 a case for wrapped stock.

Present retail prices prevailing in the city are as follows:

A worth-while Reputation

The head of one of this country's great manufacturing institutions says:

"The Man who builds and the man who buys are both beneficiaries of reputation. To the one it is a continuous spur and incentive--to the other, the strongest of all guarantees that what he buys is worthy."

Patronize the manufacturer or merchant who has a reputation for honesty and fair dealing. Such motives must actuate the consistent advertiser. The man who invests real money in building a reputation for himself and his merchandise cannot afford to risk any of it by taking unfair advantage of his customers. He must retain the good-will of the buying public. Without this, his business cannot succeed

Every time he advertises he puts his reputation in your hands. His products or the wares he has for sale must make good. His service must be as advertised.

That is why it pays to read advertisements, to deal with advertisers and to buy advertised goods.

Yes, it is worth your while to Read The Advertisements

Well Mother! The children settled down in school again but the old problem still faces you. It is up to you to provide everything for autumn and winter from boots to a bottle of cough mixture.

It's a busy time for you. New clothes are needed for growing boys and girls; more substantial food for cool days must be thought about; books and games for the approaching hours of darkness are needed to keep home happy.

Let your newspaper help you. A few minutes spent every day in reading the daily store news in the advertisements which the merchants have inserted for your information will save you any fatiguing hours of shopping.

Which stores can supply you, and most economically?

Learn all this by reading the daily store news comfortably in your home newspaper in your own easy chair.
