CITY COUNCIL BACKS POLICE

Approves Proposal of Commissioners to Put More Men on Cleanup Work

THREE ALTERNATIVES

Approval by the civic finance committee of the police commission's undertaking to institute a clean-up campaign directed especially against prostitution and illicit liquor selling in the downtown section of the city was expressed at a conference of the two bodies which took place yesterday afternoon in the city council chamber. The meeting was called for the purpose of obtaining the finance committee's views on the expenditure of additional moneys over and above the year's estimates for the purpose. Those present were Mayor Newton, Commissioner R. W. Cameron, Ald. M. M. Stephens, Ald. Theo. Collart and Ald. Mackenzie.

Mayor Newton explained how the police commission had decided that something must be done to remedy conditions downtown which at the present time were anything but satisfactory. A statement had been prepared showing that if expenditures of the police department for the remaining four months of the year averaged as they had done for the past eight months there would be no balance over estimates but rather a slight deficit. There was but one of three courses to follow—first, to proceed incurring additional expenditures that would have to be met by the city through the finance committee; second, let the attorney general send in a force and deduct its cost from the city's share of liquor profits; or third, put up with conditions as they now existed.

One Course Open

Ald. Stephens felt that there was only one course open to the city council. The police department was in a peculiar position and could not very well exactly estimate its expenses at the beginning of the year. He believed that the commission had been honest in bringing down its estimates in January and had worked honestly throughout the year in the matter of expenditures. If the commission felt now that additional expenditure was necessary in coping with the situation that was only one thing the council could do, namely furnish the wherewithal. The council should not be niggardly or even request the commission to refrain from such a step if, in its opinion, it was necessary. Apparently it had no desire to run the city unduly into unnecessary expense and he for one appreciated the position of the commission. While the finances of the city might be none too plentiful, money must be provided for the proper policing of the city.

Ald. Collart wanted to know what the provincial police was doing and was told by Commissioner Cameron that it had no jurisdiction. Ald. Collart felt that the question was something for the council rather than the finance committee to deal with. What was being done with the fines that the police department collected through the medium of the police court? Commissioner Cameron stated that the police department received no credit for them. They all went to the city's general revenue. Chief Vickers estimated that fines since the first of the year had totalled $1,000 or $5,000.

Downtown Sections

Ald. Collart felt that prostitution in the downtown sections of the city was even more serious than bootlegging. In fact, the two seemed to go hand in hand. Everybody but the police seemed to know that it was going on. There ought to be some method of getting the offenders out of town.

The officers of the Japanese Association of Port Essington had recently visited the hospital and paid up old Japanese accounts amounting to $211.80 and at the same time given a donation to the institution of $148.20, making a check in all for $360.
