Among all lawn tennis players, Vincent Richards of the United States stands out as the most remarkable player for his age that has ever been known says the Manchester Guardian. In 1918 he became the doubles champion of the United States in partnership with "Big Bill" Tilden at the age of fifteen. Gaining further distinction since that time and meeting with the greatest players, last season, he stood out as the third best player in the world-at nineteen years of age.

Unlike most of the youthful wonders of the American continent, Richards comes from the Eastern States, Yonkers, New York, being his home. A further point of difference, and one that augurs well for a prolonged career, is that his game is based on placing rather than sheer pace. He combines the steadiness and headwork of a veteran with the agility of youth. He adds to these the wonderful powers of anticipation of a Norman Brookes and the delicate touch of a violinist. He is indeed the Kubelik of lawn tennis, thinks the writer in the Manchester Guardian, who says the sheer artistry of his play is without an equal. These qualities make him, the finest volleyer in the world today. Richards already reveals occasionally a real "hit" on the forehand, and when this becomes consistent and sure there is no reason why he should not fulfil Tilden's prophecy of two years ago and become "the greatest player the world has ever
