City Manager Is Discussed.

A group of businessmen in the south lunched together recently and spent their time discussing the question of employing a city manager to have charge of the affairs of the city. As outlined the scheme was to have a council elected by the people to discuss, direct and control questions of public policy, legislation and finance. In addition to this it was suggested there should be an experienced appointed manager or commissioner to carry out the decisions of the council, to supervise and control administrative detail of all departments and to advise the council on all technical questions and finance.

The system was spoken of as an ideal one and in the course of the discussion it was pointed out that it was impossible to have efficiency from an administration guided by a mayor and a number of aldermen of different schools of thought and business training, temperament and ability. The case of the Canadian National Railway was given as an instance where it was necessary that there should be an administrative head. There, a business man was chosen to have charge of a business institution and apply to it business methods.

The main objection was to giving the mayor and aldermen administrative duties to perform for which they were in most cases wholly unfitted. It was found to fail because it was an unsound method and could not give results. If the mayor chosen happened to be a man who was trained in business methods he might do some good for a period but his tenure of office would probably be short. The member of the city council or the school-board was a politician on a small scale. He always had his ear toward the constituency that elected him and did unwise things with a view to securing re-election. Even if he were not so influenced, he usually had no training for the work before him. No business could live with that kind of management and the wonder was that more cities did not go into bankruptcy.

Consolidated School System Is Spreading.

The Provincial Government has for some years been encouraging the extension of the system of consolidated schools to which the children from a distance are conveyed by motor car or some other mode of conveyance suited to the conditions. It is claimed for the system that better supervision and teaching conditions are obtained than would be possible in the small one-roomed schools that have been scattered all over the country.

This system is spreading also through some parts of the United States with good results.

Must Take Care Of City Streets.

Visitors who have been here in previous years are loud in praise of the appearance of the city since the streets have been resurfaced. In order to keep up this appearance and also to save money for the ratepayers, it is necessary that the streets shall be constantly watched and kept in condition. It is easier to mend a bad place when it is small than when it develops into a big hole.

The autumn season is close on us and with it we must expect more rain and also frosts. These will tend to disintegrate the street surface unless care is taken to prevent it. The lower part of Third Ave. was an experiment that seems to have failed, yet the property owners there were assessed for the work done on it. It will be for the city that did the experimenting to keep that road in condition. It is already going to pieces.

The increase in motor traffic is one of the things that has to be contended with in any street work. In a few years the amount of traffic will have increased immensely. Nothing can stop it. The only thing we can do is adapt ourselves to the changing conditions.

NATIVES HAVE CHARGE OF ANGLICAN SERVICES

Music and Preaching Are of High Order and Proved Interesting to Congregations

Most interesting services were held at the Church of England yesterday. The natives of the district who had been here for the Fair did all the singing and preaching. At the morning service Alfred Adams of Massett gave a good address, speaking of the coming of the gospel to Massett and what it had done for the natives there. He particularly asked that the white people would remember that while there were many good Indians that there were also many weak ones before whom they should not put temptation. This was a point people of Prince Rupert should take to heart. At this service a solo was finely sung by Benjamin Munro of Aiyansh.

In the evening the chief address was given by Paul Mercer of Aiyansh who spoke of the work on the Naas and deeply impressed the people present by the splendid spiritual tone of what he said. In addition to this a spirited five minute address was given by Caleb Mathers, a native of Alaska. A good solo was sung by Alfred Adams and at both services the Aiyansh choir had charge of the music and in the evening rendered a very excellent anthem. The organist of the Aiyansh choir is an expert, and his playing was greatly enjoyed. The whole day gave an exhibition of the native at his best and that best was of an exceedingly high standard.

MEMORIAL SERVICE LATE MAGNUS BERG

Good Turnout in Salvation Army Citadel Last Night and Collection to Japanese Relief

The Salvation Army service in the citadel last night took the form of a memorial for the late Magnus O. Berg, pioneer worker of the Army in this city who met a tragic death last week. Capt. Coleman presided, Capt. Chaik of Anox took the lesson and Mrs. Coleman, Lieut. Renas and Bro. A. Martin spoke, referring fittingly to the memory of deceased. There was a vocal duet by Capt. and Mrs. Coleman, "Only Remembered by What We Have Done."

There was a good turnout and the collection went towards Japanese relief.
