MR. ARNOLD EXPLAINS ABOUT HIS EVIDENCE

Says he Has Different Basis for Calculation to Mr. McCaffery

E. H. Arnold has shanded in the following for publication: Editor, Daily News:

Mr. McCaffery, in his testimony in the assessment appeal case, was, I take it, talking politics; so his little fairy story about the pot of gold which was to be found at the end of the rainbow he painted in the form of every lot in Prince Rupert being worth at least a thousand dollars inside of six years, was quite in order. It was characteristically whimsical.

I, on the other hand, was talking about some rock and muskeg on the outskirts of the town some two miles out and estimating what a prudent person trying to accumulate a competency for his old age might perhaps be justified in paying for those lots now. And the most liberal figure I could concede to him was $45.00 per lot.

Since we were talking about different things it is not at all remarkable that our estimates were very divergent.

G. H. ARNOLD.

Negotiations With Japan for Modification of Treaty Under Which Immigrants Come Here

OTTAWA, March 24.—Canada is negotiating with Japan for a modification of the immigration treaty between the two countries under which not more than 400 Japanese laborers are allowed to emigrate to Canada each year. Premier Mackenzie King stated in the House of Commons yesterday.

Mr. King said the treaty provided that if an unreasonable number of Japanese entered Canada, steps could be taken to prevent them, but a careful check showed that less than 400 yearly had entered during the last ten years.

W. G. McQuarrie, member for New Westminster, said the Japanese government might keep faith but individual Japanese did not. More were entering Canada illegally than legally.

The treaty was subject to the Canadian Immigration Act and the government should use its right to prevent the entry of people whose habits and climatic nativity made them undesirable, said Mr. McNeill of Comox-Alberni who favored abrogation of the Canadian-Japanese treaty, if that would stop Japanese immigration. Mr. Neill said he did not fear that Japan would stop trading with Canada if the treaty were denounced. He pointed out that there was a clause in the Act providing that a Jap holding one hundred acres of land could bring in ten Japs but nothing was specified as to how many times. These ten could be imported. If the Japanese government was sincerely anxious to enforce the spirit of the treaty, why did they not investigate stowaways as they arrived in Canada and why did not the Dominion government also investigate stowaways.

Investigation Started

The minister of immigration assured Mr. McNeill that an investigation into the whole question had already started.

Mr. Stewart then turned to the Chinese immigration estimates which amounted to $60,000 and which were finally passed. He said 1459 Chinese had been admitted to Canada during the fiscal year 1921 and during the present fiscal year the number admitted had been 617 for eleven months. The Chinese Bill now before the House provided for the abolishing of the head tax and permitting only students and merchants entering Canada.

Mr. McQuarrie said swarms of children were coming with every boat from the Orient. Were they really children of present residents and why not restrict the period in which merchants could

EDUCATION FOR ALL CITIZENS

Sir Henry Newbolt Would Fit Every Man For a Life of Harmony and Service

PURPOSE OF LEARNING

Would Have Every Person Given the Same Advantage as His Neighbor

True education does not consist in cramming children with facts which they will soon forget. True education is the training which fits a man for a life of harmony and service with his fellows. Sir Henry Newbolt, the distinguished English educationist and poet, declared in the course of an address before the Canadian Club at its luncheon in the Empress Hotel, Victoria, a few days ago. This true education, he emphasized, involved the teaching of the English language, and this teaching, he believed, would make possible a new unity among the British races and among the nations of the whole world.

Up to the present, Sir Henry observed, education in the best sense had been confined to certain privileged classes. While he did not believe that English people would abandon their present system of private schools he foresaw the day when rich and poor alike would receive the same education. In time the laboring man (continued on page six)
