WILD RICE EXPERIMENT

Being Tried Here by Alex. McRae - Expensive Seed Imported Specially by Local Bird Hunter

An experiment in the planting of wild rice as an attraction for wild ducks and geese is being tried by Alex. McRae, the enthusiastic bird hunter of this city.

In planting the seed, Mr. McRae simply scattered it in the lake where the water was from six inches to two feet deep with a muddy bottom.

Mr. McRae obtained the seed from the East and landed here it cost about $1 a pound. It is expensive to start with and the method of transporting it and the care that has to be taken of it in transit just about doubles the original cost.

Mr. Campbell, from whom Mr. McRae obtained the seed, is in the government employ in connection with game conservation and has made extensive studies of the habits of migratory fowl.

In Ontario the rice lakes are filled with ducks and geese and it is Mr. McRae's idea to ascertain if the same effect may obtain here with the use of the wild rice. Inadvertently it might provide for him a nice little hunting ground close at hand for his exclusive use if he can keep its identity concealed.

COMING TO CANADA TO SLAY WOLVES

Capt. Frank Doudera Can Get Only One Backer in Attack on Ferocious Beasts

NEW YORK, Jan. 24.—(By Canadian Press).—There are tough days ahead for the wolves in that section of the continent which the U.S. papers love to refer to as "The wilds of Canada."

Doudera told a reporter of the Brooklyn Eagle that he is looking for four men "who have nerve enough to face a wolf pack alone if need be to join him in a drive against the wolves in Canada which are a great menace to the inhabitants of the small townships there."

That is how the doughty Captain Doudera puts it. He already has one recruit, Joseph Sartori, who has accompanied Captain Doudera on many of his trips to Alaska and other places.

decided expedition, informs its readers that the wolves are causing great fear in many settlements in Canada and "an appeal has been broadcasted for men with nerve to hunt them down and destroy the great menace."

"Capt. Doudera is asking others to join him and wants it made plain that the undertaking is one of great danger. He wants men who are willing to throw caution to the winds and take a chance. He wants hunters with experience and men who are dead shots with a rifle. He himself, is one of the most expert marksmen in the Brooklyn battalion of the field artillery and has had experience in hunting and exploring.

Only One Willing "Since announcing his intention to make the trip to Canada, Capt. Doudera has not been swamped with applicants. In fact, Sartori is the only one so far who is willing to go."

Geese and ducks are very plentiful in the neighborhood of Prince Rupert at the present time but the season is over and there is nothing for the law abiding hunters to do but regretfully mourn the fact that the open season closes on December 25 and not on February 1, as many of them maintain it should.

The definite location of mountain sheep at Grant Brook near Lucerne on the line of the Canadian National Railway is said to mark a departure in the movement of the sheep in the mountain district. Heretofore they have been generally found much further north than this.
