Shop Du Vernet Writes to Discover Province of His Latest Experiments

SPACE ONLY RELATIVE. Physical Contrivance Necessary Because of Barrier of the Brain

Recent issue of the Vancouver Province is an article of Shop Du Vernet dealing with an experiment in radio-clearing up some points which there seems to have confusion among his critics.

Unexplored field of undiscovered knowledge is the subconscious mind. The opening of the tomb of an Egyptian cannot compare in importance with the exploring of the depths of the human mind.

Several years of earnest work have come to the conclusion that while our conscious mind tends to individualize us, our subconscious mind tends to unite us. We are not isolated. We are all members of one mental complex. Slowly we are realizing our mental union with the Universal Mind.

The experiments in radio-clearing which my daughter and I have recently making with simple success, we have employed a simple mechanical contrivance consisting of a long metal rod weighing a quarter of an ounce, and attached to the end of the pencil and held in the hand.

May Draw Ridicule. Unless this little pendulum set with much the same formula as the unthinking as formula has done, but it is a similar purpose only exact reverse order. Whereas the beating of the formula is to be thought into the subconscious mind, the swinging of the pendulum is to get a thought out of the same subconsciousness register with scientific material body in motion, and mind energy is a spiritual force. As a trained psychologist I have not only been making original experiments, but I have been critically observing these experiments and so have something to announce to the scientific world, though I feel that I am just on the threshold of the mystery of the mind.

Experiment in Schools
As to the Chevreul pendulum, I think every high school should use this to demonstrate the first principle of psychology, the law of ideomotor action. If the boy is to make a success in life, it is well for him to see with his eyes how an idea in his mind works itself out in his actions.

Mind and Nerves Connected
It may be asked how can the little pendulum record unconscious thoughts. The answer is because of the most intimate relationship between the subconscious mind and the sympathetic nervous system which, in turn, controls the involuntary actions of our vital organs and twitching muscles. I fail to see at present how it would be possible to get a scientific proof of telepathy capable of repetition at will without some mechanical contrivance to register the unconscious activities of the subconscious mind. In our experience we found that the intervening lengthening of the progressive distance, first by yards, then by rods, and then by miles, did not make the slightest difference. From 7 miles away the message came in just as strongly as from seven feet away. Space is only relative to a mathe two persons should be standing side by side.

Distance No Consideration
If the word thought of by the one, letter by letter, is correctly recorded by the other's pendulum, there has been thought transference.

The third step is for these two persons to put as many notes as they like between them and repeat the experiment. The only difficulty now is to get coincidence in time.

I have found by experience that it is well to make use of the law of rhythm, timing my concentrations to accord with the swing of the pendulum. Knowing that what the will is to the conscious mind, the imagination is to the subconscious mind, I have found it helpful for each operator to visualize the other.

Perhaps this is the greatest contribution I have to make to the cause of science. The supposed barrier of space between two entities can be effectually annihilated by the power of the imagination working through the fundamental union of all souls in the realm of the subconscious world.

The object of these experiments is not to cause a passing excitement, but to give a scientific demonstration of the psychic truth which lies at the foundation of the Fellowship of the Spirit and the Commission of the Saints.
