PLAGUE OF LOCUSTS PROVIDES MATERIAL FOR A NEW FACTORY

Drought in South Africa Gives Farmers and Others an Anxious Time

LONDON, Dec. 8-Owing to the very severe drought and the early appearance of locusts, South African farms are experiencing a very anxious time, says the Johannesburg correspondent of the Daily News. There is at present little, if any, grass in the Transvaal, dams and wells are failing and the cattle and sheep are dying in large numbers.

The locust plague took the officials by surprise, as they hatched without rain, which is very unusual. At present they are infesting the country in large numbers. In former years it has possible to exterminate lieved of the burden. I can tell them methodically, according to you that the pinch is coming and the rainfall, but in the present dry season this cannot be done.

> The only bright spot in the situation at present is that one of the greatest pesis of South Africa is likely to be converted into commodities that will prove of great value to the farmer.
