ENGLISH GIRL CHOSEN AS TYPICAL AMERICAN

When a girl born and bred in England, of English parentage, English education and experience on the English stage, goes to America and immediately upon her arrival is selected as the ideal American girl, it is something of a shock, both to her and to Americans. It reminds them of their kinship to that island across the sea and makes them feel that the chief difference between their English cousins is the number of miles to separate them.

This is what happened to Dorothy Mackaill, who plays the leading role in the Edwin Carewe production, "Mighty Lak a Rose," coming to the Westholme Theatre tonight. Having been told by Ned Wayburn, in whose show she was appearing in London, of the greater opportunity for actresses in America, she decided to come to the land of promise. Which she did, and which she would do again, if she had the matter to decide again, only she'd be just twice as quick.

about it the next time, she says. For not only was the little English actress welcomed to America, but even the critics who saw her on the screen and about the footlights spoke of her as the ideal American girl.

WESLEY BARRY IN ROLICKING STORY

"Rags to Riches" is Full of Humor and Rare Charm

Wesley Barry, the thirteen year old boy star of screendom is featured in "Rags to Riches," to be shown here Wednesday. The picture, with its wholesomeness and spirit of adventure, went straight to everybody's heart. One wonders who enjoyed it most—the young or the old, the men or the women. Certainly, it is hard to say, for the children come out wanting to emulate their boy hero, the women wanted their lads or brothers to be as plucky and fine, and the older men grew reminiscent over their youthful days.

"Rags to Riches" is a Harry Rapf production, sponsored by Warner Brothers, and is adapted from the celebrated stage success by Charles A. Taylor.

The picture shows Wes as Marmaduke Clarke, son of wealthy parents, who pappered him too much. A burglar, bent upon ransacking the house, gives the lad a chance at action, and he follows the man through a series of exciting episodes, which ends unexpectedly with the rounding up of a gang of crooks. But not before Marmaduke has found his burglar to be a secret service agent and has witnessed the happy ending of a love episode which at one moment threatened to go wrong.

GRIM BATTLE IN "BURNING SANDS"

Milton Sills and Robert Cain Mix in Battle Royal

One of the best catch-as-catch-can fights to be seen on the screen in some time is a feature of George Melford's new Paramount production of "Burning Sands." There was no rehearsing of the scene in which Milton Sills and Robert Cain "go to the mat," but it had to be taken several times, as usual. Both men were in prime training and hardened habits of the Legion Stadium, after seeing the film battle, remarked that the fight was one of the most realistic ever seen on the screen.

Wanda Hawley and Mr. Sills are featured in "Burning Sands," which will be shown at the Westholme Theatre at the week end. In the story Miss Hawley is an English girl who falls in love with Daniel Lane, a hermit who lives alone on an oasis in the desert. This is the part portrayed by Mr. Sills. In the course of the action, Barthampton, a renegade Englishman, plans to abduct the girl and is prevented by Lane from executing his design after a terrible battle in which Barthampton is killed.

The picture is filled with thrills and there is a capable supporting cast.

INSURES LIFE OF YOUTHFUL STAR FOR HUNDRED THOUSAND

The life of Jackie Coogan, the film star, is being insured for $100,000. He is the world's smallest heavy wage earner and the youngest millionaire to acquire a fortune by his personal efforts. Jackie's juvenility is one of his greatest assets as a film star. Most men earn their largest salaries in middle age, but childhood is undoubtedly the salary peak of the Coogan career.

The careers of theatrical stars, both in movie-land and on the legitimate stage, often wane rapidly. Jackie Coogan has created an estate for himself which will be his no matter how fickle popular fame and fortune prove.
