Results Of Closing Port.

Discussing the possibility of closing the port of Prince Rupert to American fishermen, which eventually it seems to consider quite within the range of possibility, the Pacific Fisherman has the following to say:

Opinions vary widely as to what the results would be, but the brunt of the hardship resulting from the closing of Canadian ports would fall on the American fishermen. They feel that the Prince Rupert market is absolutely essential to their continued welfare, and some would undoubtedly quit the field if this were closed to them.

One possibility that has been discussed is to change the boats to Canadian registry. This would require government permission, which might or might not be easily secured. To stand the 2c per lb. duty on Canadian fish would probably be cheaper for them than to take any of the other alternatives offered; but there are other difficulties. Engine parts and mechanical equipment would cost them 35 to 40 per cent more on the Canadian side; they would be cut off from access to the Ketchikan and Seattle markets and the Alaska freezers; and there is no assurance that the American duty would not be raised.

Little Benefit For Ketchikan.

Ketchikan interests have long fought strenuously to stop the landing of American halibut fares at Prince Rupert, in the belief that this would bring the bulk of the traffic to the Alaska port, where the fish would be prepared for shipment. This would be feasible in a large way only if the boxed fish were shipped in bond through Prince Rupert; to ship via Seattle for the Eastern markets is considered impracticable.

Some believe that a large part of the catch would be frozen at the various plants in Alaska, whose requirements would be about doubled by the proposed closed season; the balance being either handled fresh through Ketchikan or brought direct to Seattle. It is evident that the Alaska freezers would reap some advantage, which might outweigh difficulties in other directions. The fishermen, however, feel that this would place them at a marked disadvantage in the matter of prices, and do not greatly relish the idea of fishing for the freezers as a regular thing.

Step Would Be Serious One.

One phase worthy of consideration is that so far discussion of the matter at issue has been of an amicable nature. Comparatively few American interests give any strong approval to the present tariff restrictions, and many feel that Congress did not intend to place a duty on fresh or frozen fish coming through Canada, if owned continuously by American interests.

XMAS MESSAGES AT ROTARY CLUB

Greetings from Far Away New Zealand—Also from District Governor.

The following Christmas messages from the Rotary Club at Auckland, New Zealand, and from Miles Higley, district governor, were read at yesterday afternoon's meeting of the Prince Rupert Rotary Club by President Dr. H. R. Grant:

From New Zealand

New Zealand. Would you please, at your nearest Christmas meeting, convey to your Club President and Members the following message: International Director Charles Rhodes; Special Commissioner, the Hon. George Fowlds; President H. W. Segar and members of the Auckland Rotary Club, send Christmas and New Year Greetings. May the spirit of friendship, goodwill and happiness, health and prosperity be yours during this Christmas time and throughout the years to come.

Our Club is your Club, though thousands of miles divide us; we are joined by the Rotary spirit of service, friendship, goodwill.

Kia Oro. "Huteh."

From District Governor

Rotarians: The recurrence of the Yuletide Season brings to mind the fact that we as Rotarians should ever be mindful of the blessing which come to us, not only as individuals, but to the organization we all love so well.

Looking backward over a year of progress our membership may well be proud of its accomplishments.

To have helped the other fellow, lightened a burden, relieved distress, adds a luster to Rotarianism time cannot efface.

The determination to continue a work so well and ably begun by our predecessors is a resolution well worthy the best efforts of every Rotarian.

Shall we not pledge ourselves anew, on the threshold of the New Year, by cooperating as one man, to make the coming year the best we have ever enjoyed, thus fulfilling the greatest expectations of the most earnest Rotarian.

With best personal wishes to all,

MILES H. HIGLEY, District Governor.

BRANCH BANKS ARE CLOSED UNDER SAW-OFF PLAN ADOPTED

A co-operative movement is under way throughout the province between various banks for the closing of certain unprofitable branches overlapping one another.

One bank, under the scheme, closes one branch and another closes one in return. An example is the closing of branches of the Royal Bank at Ashcroft and Abbotsford in return for which the Bank of Montreal closed branches at Vanderhoof and Quesnel. Similar action, it is stated, may be taken at other points in this district.

Ten Years Ago in Prince Rupert

December 21, 1913.

The funeral of the late Mrs. Duncan McKenzie took place this afternoon from Hayner Bros. chapel at Fairview Cemetery, the cortege being one of the longest ever seen in Prince Rupert. Rev. P. W. Kerr officiated and the pallbearers were: Archie McDougall, David McKenzie, William McRae, R. R. McKinnon, John Munro and Rod McLeod.

The children of the Rand Block School under the supervision of Miss Elsie Taylor held their closing exercises yesterday afternoon. Following the entertainment there was an informal afternoon tea. Miss Elizabeth Taylor and Miss Maude Haslett assisting in serving.

A. W. Agnew denies the allegation of Ex-Ald. D. W. Morrissey that he misrepresented facts in connection with the Prince Rupert Hydro-Electric Co.

MOCK TRIAL PROVES HUMOROUS AT LUNCH

Rotary Club Holds Interesting Session of Light Nature at St. Regis

At the Rotary luncheon yesterday there was a mock trial in which C. H. Orme was charged by Dr. Kerwin with having sold a bottle of hair restorer to Dr. Grant and to Consul Wakefield guaranteed to grow hair knowing that it could not be effective. Thomas McClymont was the judge, Jack Nicholls counsel for the prosecution, and M. P. McCaffery for the defence.

Evidence of a humorous nature was given by the witnesses and the cross examination and pleadings of the counsel for either side proved ingenious and funny.

At the close His Lordship said he found the prisoner guilty and sentenced him to celebrate Christmas by taking internally some of his own medicine instead of that with the label having the Scotchman in kilts in the corner such as he intended to take.

COLONEL McMULLIN IS MAKING CHANGES

Will Introduce Fingerprint Department under Provincial Police

VICTORIA, Dec. 20.—With the first of the New Year the Provincial police will have added another branch to its work which is aimed at an important development in the future. This will be the nucleus of what is deemed to become the clearing house of criminal identification work in the Province.

Col. J. H. McMullin explained that the system would be added to from time to time as the work progressed. The office will be under the initial direction of Constable W. J. Voisey, one of the best known fingerprint experts in the Province, and for many years identified with that branch of the work at the New Westminster office.

Finger print records, and photographic identification of criminals handled by the proposed B.C. central bureau which
