DEFENCE OF PORT SIMPSON BOYS IS THEY WERE NO WHERE AROUND WHEN BOYD YOUNG WAS SET UPON

father. He had about 840 or 850. Regarding his actions on the night in question he corroborated evidence given by other defence witnesses. He had been in the house all the evening after 8.30 and had not seen or been near Boyd Young after 7 o'clock when he had made some purchases in his store. The blood had come on his and Kevin's clothes through boxing a few days before. Kevin's nose was bleeding as he was breaking from a clinch. He had lost 21 pounds in Okalla prison. He had been five months at Okalla and nine months in jail altogether since his arrest.

Mr. Craig—Did you ever state to Clarence Watson that if you hit Young, Bert Flewin would pay your fine?

Flewin—I did not? Accused was questioned by Mr. Craig as to being at a party at Alice Watson's some two years ago and telling her that his mother had not wanted him to go and he had climbed out of the window and down a tree from his room. Flewin answered that he remembered the party but did not remember making the statement though he might have done so. He might have explained to Alice Watson that he got out of the house that way but he certainly had never got out of the house by way of the tree.

Raymond Kevis corroborated the evidence of Flewin and other defence witnesses and, answering His Lordship's questions, said he had been born at Rossland and his people now live at Port Alberni. He did not know where his father was. He had lived with his stepfather and mother and his real name was Petrie. He had been working at the logging camps at Port Alberni and had met Flewin there. He Kevis was blowing a whistle in a logging camp and Flewin was on the rigging gang. He did not get along with his stepfather and latterly had not lived at home. He had heard of the north and wanted to see the country so had come with Flewin. He liked the country but he intended going back to Vancouver to get work. He was 17 years of age and was 16 when he was arrested.

His Lordship declared adjournment until 10 this morning. Mr. Craig stated that he intended calling more witnesses regarding Flewin's statements about climbing out of the window by a tree. He would also call another witness to prove that accused had been in a store about 10.30 on the night in question. Court adjourned at 10.30.

Down Cherry Tree

The first witness called this morning by the crown was Miss Thelma Watson who told of Clarence Flewin having said he got out of his parents' home to attend a party at her house two years ago by sliding down the cherry tree from his bedroom window after his mother had forbidden him going. Mrs. Alice Watson, mother of Thelma, corroborated this.

Had Bad Pains in Her Heart

Nerves were very bad

Mrs. John Case, R. R. No. 4, St. Catharines, Ont., writes:—"I wish to say that I have been bothered very much with my heart and nerves. I doctored with two different doctors, but did not find much relief. I would have such bad pains in my heart, at times, I would be almost afraid to move or breathe, and at night I could not sleep. If the pains in my heart were gone, my nerves would be so bad I could not be still and would only get a little sleep by being tired out. My stomach was also very bad and I could eat but very little, and then only certain things or I would have so much distress which always made my heart worse.

I had been suffering for nearly two years until one day I was talking to our druggist about the way I felt. He advised me to give Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills a fair trial. I have now taken five boxes and am feeling so much better, I am able to do my own work, and can eat anything I wish. I cannot praise too highly."

roboredated this.

David Johnson, native merchant, was also called to the stand by the prosecution. He told of Flewin and Kevis having been in his store shortly before 10 o'clock on the night in question.

C. B. Flewin was recalled by the crown and asked of a conversation he had had with Constable Hanna on October 24, in which he had stated that the last he saw of Clarence Flewin on September 11 was at 9.30 p.m. He admitted the conversation but denied having made such a statement.

Concluding Evidence

Constable Hanna, on being called, said that C. B. Flewin had told him he had last seen the accused at 9.30 on the night of Sept. 11. In answer to a question by Mr. Patmore, Constable Hanna said he had no knowledge of how the crown got Mr. Flewin's letter to Mrs. Kevis.

Dominion Constable E. G. Newnham, called in rebuttal of a statement made by John Flewin that he had not offered to show Constable Newnham the scene of the assault on the day following, said that Mr. Flewin had offered to do so.

This concluded the evidence.

Patmore Address

In addressing the jury, Mr. Patmore asked that special notice be taken of the circumstantial evidence that had been presented. There was no direct evidence except that of Mr. Boyd Young. Dates, times and identities varied greatly and the evidence given by the Indians had been of an unreliable nature. Boyd Young was the only person to positively identify Flewin and nobody had identified Kevis. Considering Boyd Young's condition after the wounds and the fact that he had a preconceived idea that it was the doings of the Flewins, could such testimony be used to convict the boys? Against the unreliable evidence of the crown as to the whereabouts of the boys, they had the evidence of all the defence witnesses. Evidence showed that two men resembling Flewin and Kevis had been seen that night and they were Naas river Indians. The accused were bright boys and would they not have taken more precautions if they were guilty? Would they not have disguised themselves or, on knowing that Boyd Young had recognized Flewin, finished him? Would they have attempted such a job on the night of their departure and would they not have done away with their bloody clothes instead of claiming them? Surely a criminal was not going to leave a trail a mile wide behind him? To believe such was preposterous. The defence had procured evidence which, if believed, must show that the boys had positively not done the deed. If circumstantial evidence pointed to the accused and they gave a reasonable explanation such as had been done in regard to the blood on their clothes, the jury must give them the benefit of the doubt. From the evidence, he could not see how any other conclusion could be reached than that the boys were not guilty.

Queen's Address

C. W. Craig, crown prosecutor, stated to the jury that, if the evidence of Mr. Boyd Young was to be believed and it was conceded it had been given in good faith, at all events Clarence Flewin must be guilty. There was good reason that Mr. Boyd Young should recognize Flewin for he had known him for many years. The fact that he did not know Kevis so well probably explained why he could not identify him. The correct view for the jury to take, he thought, was that the accused had intended to kill Boyd Young and had left him thinking he was dead. The fact that they had joined forces in the defence, had been together and had sworn they were both in the Flewin house at the time of the assault would bring the conclusion, if the alibi were not believed, that both were guilty. Their guilt depended altogether on the correctness or otherwise of their alibi.

Mr. Craig attacked the evidence of John Flewin and pointed to several inconsistencies between what he had said in the box and what he had said in letters that he had written. He had said positively in a letter that Kevis was not away from his house. In the evidence it had been shown that he had been away for at least two hours. Not every witness could be tripped up as easily as that. John Flewin was apparently the head of the defence and there were so many inconsistencies in his evidence that he failed to see how it could be accepted.

Regarding the difference in height between Flewin and Kevis, Mr. Craig suggested that the crime had taken place nearly a year ago and Kevis was still a growing boy. The blood on the clothes had the appearance of having gushed instead of having come from a bloody nose in a boxing bout.

If the alibi was not believed it was a convincing proof of guilt. If it had not been a case of attempted murder, it certainly bore all appearances of being such. He would ask the jury to return such a verdict as they believed the case warranted.
